By L. A. FARRELL.

Tax relief proposals from the present general assembly hung in the balance Wednesday night following Governor Talmadge's plea to the legislature that the house's plan for a $5,000 homestead exemption be abandoned for his own program calling for a 10-mill overall ad valorem tax and a levy on intangibles with teeth enough to secure collection of such a levy.

The governor, in his speech, made it clear that he would not accept any proposal which called for exemptions unless adopted by the legislature. The senate already has voted to approve the 10-mill limitation proposal but the house rejected it and stood by the $5,000 exemption plan which is sponsored by Speaker E. D. Rivers. Conference committees were named to begin work today and the whole situation depends on whether the legislature conferees get together on a proposal agreeable to Speaker Rivers and the governor. With the chief executive apparently determined to have the limitation plan or none, it appeared that unless the house switched to it no proposal to the people will be voted during the current session which ends at midnight Saturday night.

Conferees Appointed.
The conferees named to iron out the situation were Senators Pope, of Lyons, Duncan, of Perry, and John Royston, of Royston, and Representatives Lanier, of Richmond county; Sutton, of Wilkes county; and Mundy, of Polk county. The senate members of the committee all are strong advocates of the limitation plan. The house members are just as strong for the exemption plan.

The Talmadge speech was the outstanding event of the day although the senate passed the beer and wine bills, after adding referenda and then put through the general tax act, minus the controversial chain store tax. The latter was dropped from the tax act on recommendation of the finance committee because it is handled in a special bill which is pending in the senate. The house passed and killed

Arrival of Spring Due Officially Today

NEW YORK, March 20.—(AP)—Spring begins officially at 8:18 a. m. tomorrow, but its arrival doesn't assure warm weather.
For example:
The mercury dropped to 11 above zero on March 23 last year, and to 12 above zero on April 1, 1923.
Ten inches of snow fell on April 3, 1915, the Saturday preceding Easter, and 5 1-2 inches on April 9, 1907.

HOUSE REJECTS SENATE REVISION OF BEER MEASURE

Bill Calling for May 15
Referendum Thrown Into Committee; Wine
Action Is Delayed.

The beer bill, amended to include a referendum May 15 and passed by the senate earlier in the day, Wednesday night was thrown into conference committee when the house disagreed to senate amendments.

Shortly afterward the wine legalization measure, also carrying a senate referendum amendment, came up in the house but action was delayed as the legislators decided to pass up a number of measures pending.
Over in the senate a bill to tax chain stores was definitely sidetracked when a vote of 25-15 indefinitely postponed action, putting the measure at the foot of the calendar with little chance of its being considered before Saturday midnight adjournment. The chain store tax bill, sponsored by the Richmond delegation, was taken out of the general tax act, where the house had inserted it, by the senate. Senator Simmons, chairman of the senate finance committee, that he was sure Governor Talmadge would veto the tax act if the chain store bill was included.

The senate passed the beer legislation by a vote of 33 to 14 after providing for the referendum urged by Governor Talmadge. The Cobb bill, providing for domestic wine, also will be adopted after the referendum was attached.
The beer and wine referenda were set by the senate for May 15, the same date fixed for a vote on repeal of the bone dry law, a measure which is on Governor Talmadge's desk and which he is expected to sign as soon as the beer and wine bills are formally enacted.

The house rejected the beer bill and asked for a conference committee because the senate eliminated the referendum plan for diverting the yield from the beer tax to the common schools to buy free school books. The senate amended the measure to provide that the funds from the tax go into the school treasury for general uses.

As amended by the senate the tax is set at $2.00 per barrel, or $1.25 per barrel. The senate also fixed

SMITH PREDICTS STRONG CAMPAIGN ON COTTON LEVIES

Senator Chairman of Agriculture Group To Confer With Exchange
President Today.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—Developments in the cotton situation, disturbed by the market break and Japan's rapid gains in textiles, centered today on proposals to lift the processing tax.

In the face of an assertion by President Roosevelt that no other way has been suggested for raising benefit funds, Chairman Smith, of the senate agriculture committee, reiterated his intention to move to substitute relief funds for processing taxes to make the payments.

"Mr. Roosevelt will hear a lot about that," said the veteran South Carolina senator who has been moved to rapid action by the break in the cotton market and continued protests against the processing tax from the textile industry.

Meanwhile, Smith announced he will confer tomorrow with John H. MacFadden, president of the New York Cotton Exchange. Although he did not say what was the purpose of the conference, it was believed it was to discuss amended rules and regulation for the exchange.

Smith, however, has an appropriation of $10,000 to investigate the cotton price drop, and this matter may be brought up. Smith is expected to announce plans for his probe some time next week. He has expressed belief the break in cotton is a frame-up, the result of information tending to lead the impression a change in the government's cotton policy would lead to excess production this year.

A meeting of southern senators, who have adopted a resolution calling for 12 cents a pound loans on 10,000,000 bales of 1935 cotton and an increase to 50 per cent of the tax on cotton produced up to three bales from the Bankhead control act. He said he would seriously endanger the operation of the act. The Dorey bill has been passed by the house and sent to the senate, where its den has been passed by Chairman Smith of the agriculture committee.

"Wait and See."
According to Wallace, the three-bale exemption would remove a minimum of 25 per cent of the total allotment of 10,500,000 bales produced under the Bankhead act from its provisions. He suggested the two-bale exemption would take about 1,872,000 bales of the allotment.

Wallace said "wait and see," when asked if he would recommend the president veto the Dorey bill if it passed both houses of congress.
The cry against the processing tax on cotton was emphasized when Japanese reports showed startling gains in trade with the exports to Japan. Smith expressed the opinion relief funds could be used to make the benefit payments to farmers co-operating in the Bankhead control program without any amendment to the works relief bill now before the senate.

The southern senator believed the president was empowered under existing emergency legislation to use these funds in that way. The plan, he added, would do away with the processing tax, giving the textile industry relief, and at the same time assure continuance of benefit payments to growers.

Bondholders Attack Hurt Building Sale

Objections to the sale of the Hurt building Tuesday to Courts & Company and associates for a cash price of $2,281,000 were filed in Fulton superior court Wednesday. A group of bondholders protesting the sale through their attorneys contend that $2,500,000 is the fair market value of the 17-story building.

The $2,500,000 deposit of Hurt Building, Inc., deposited at the time of the original bidding on the property on March 5 was tied up by order of Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy on petition of James A. Branch, attorney, who asked a lien on the fund on a claim for $11,000 attorney's fees as counsel for Hurt Building, Inc.

Judge Pomeroy ordered Walter G. Hendrix and Ronald Ransom, receivers for the building, to hold the $2,500,000 deposit, and set a hearing on Branch's petition for March 30.

LEVEE DYAMTED, BOND, SHARE DATA MILITIA MOBILIZED GIVEN TO BOYKIN

Pitched Battle With Roving Mob of 400 Feared in Mississippi.

GREENWOOD, Miss., March 20.—(AP)—National guard troops were hurriedly ordered to Leflore county tonight to prevent possible bloodshed after several hundred men overpowered guards and dynamited a levee near Phillips in Tallahatchie county. Reports circulated that the vandals were headed toward the Dry bayou levee 12 miles north of here where 25 guards stood ready to defend it with machine guns and riot guns. They had orders to "shoot to kill" if anyone attempted to blast the embankment.

The object of dynamiting the levees is to relieve water pressure at other points and thereby prevent natural crevasses.
The entire militia force at Grenada was ordered to the flood zone. Other troops were routed from Jackson, Vicksburg and Yazoo City.
Several hundred persons overpowered a small guard on the Phillips levee about 6 o'clock and set off a charge of dynamite which tore a gaping hole in the levee, sending a cascade of water out on the eastern side of the river.

Bedford Jacks, 23, who was watching the dynamiting, suffered a fracture of the right leg when a cloud of dirt hurled by the charge struck him below the knee.
The dynamiting crowd, it was reported, threatened to move into Leflore county, bringing dynamite to blast the Dry bayou levee 12 miles north of here, which has been heavily guarded for the past four days.
The guards are armed with machine guns and riot guns, and have been instructed to shoot to kill if any attempt is made to blow the levee. The dynamiting crowd is also said to be

NRA HELPING RICH, DARROW CHARGES IN SENATE HEARING

Veteran Attorney Calls for Annihilation of Agency and Brings Sharp
Administration Reply.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—In the strange role of prosecuting attorney, aged Clarence Darrow slouched down in his chair before a senate committee today to draw an indictment of NRA which brought a sharp reply from an official of the recovery organization.

Darrow, paradoxical combination of genial philosopher and shrewd criminal lawyer, put the whole New Deal on trial before he finished, stabbing administration policies with the verbal rapier thrusts that have made him famous.

The veteran defense attorney urged the annihilation of NRA, but Sidney Hillman, member of the agency's administrative board, later told the finance committee that the abolition of the recovery organization would be followed by an "unemployment situation worse than in 1932-33."

His tired voice occasionally swayed some of the fire which swayed many juries, the rugged faced Darrow said the rich were getting richer; the poor, poorer and that the solution was "socialism."

Laugh at Quips.
A huge crowd, which took every available inch of room in the marble-lined committee room, laughed at Darrow's humorous quips at the expense of the New Deal and Donald Richberg, the bald-headed director of the National Advisory Council, who was seated close to him.

Hillman, almost stern in mien, asked that the recovery law be strengthened, rather than weakened. When New Deal policies were inaugurated, the former labor leader said the country was "drifting to a complete stagnation of industry."

"I would hate to think what would have happened if the new administration had not come in with its new policies," he added.
Members of the committee gave the two witnesses plenty of leeway, permitting them to tell their stories in their own way.

Darrow started off slowly, hesitatingly. Slumped sideways in his chair, he talked in a low voice of the organization of the NRA Review Board, which he headed last year, and its activities. He humorously criticized the fact that the first report submitted by the board was a "review of the review."

He said that the board reports were given out to the newspapers "supremely."

The 77-year-old attorney's voice rose for the first time when, asked by Senator King, democrat, Utah, for his views on NRA, he replied it was "taking business away from the little fellow and giving it to the big one."

"Big business has all the advantages," he said, "and NRA only has increased that advantage."

"Looking at the industrial struggle as a 'fight for life by the little fellows,'" Darrow warned "there will be nothing but masters and slaves before we get much further along."

"The small businessman has suffered terribly under NRA," he said. "They would have suffered anyway, but not as much."
Senator Connors, republican, Michigan, asked if Darrow would "save" any of NRA.

"I don't know that I can answer that," the old lawyer replied. "I have been long enough to be familiar with it all. But the basis of it is very bad."

Abandonment Urged.
He added that the complete abandonment of NRA would help labor and the small businessman.

At one time he turned to Richberg, with the comment:
"I'm not going to talk about you, Don. Once you were a friend of the poor man, I said once."

Darrow said NRA was started by the same economists who had "advocated killing little pigs because we had too much pork, and advocated plowing up crops for fear people would over-eat though everybody was hungry."

Fenners, Daughter
Hurt in Air Crash

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Fenners and their daughter, Miss Laura Fenners, who were on a flight from New Orleans to New York, were injured last night when their plane crashed at Shushan airport.

Miss Fenners, popular debutante of last year who recently began taking lessons as a flyer, was in Charity hospital in an undetermined condition, possibly seriously hurt.
Her father, senior partner in the nationally known firm of Fenners & Beane, stock and cotton brokers, suffered a broken right arm and lacerations of the nose.
Mrs. Fenners suffered bruises and contusions and other injuries.
John Minard, a friend of the family, who was piloting his own plane, escaped injury.

LIBERALS' DEMAND FOR BIGGER FUND BARS RELIEF VOTE

Protracted Debate Faced on Proposal To Hike Work-Relief Outlay to $9,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(UP)—Sharp words crackled and tempers exploded in the senate late today as action on the $4,880,000,000 work-relief program was halted by an effort of fighting liberals to increase the fund to $9,000,000,000.

Facing protracted debate on this proposal and on amendments calling for the purchase of 50,000,000 ounces of silver and the printing of "greenbacks" to finance the new project, leaders did not expect a final vote for another 48 hours.

Senator Robert La Follette, progressive Wisconsin, opened the battle to increase the appropriation with the statement that $100,000,000,000 could be expended today on necessary public works. He warned that the nation would not emerge from depression until millions had been re-employed and the purchasing power of the people increased.

He said he had the floor when the senate recessed and will resume his argument tomorrow. Party leaders are confident the amendment will be defeated in the face of persistent warnings from the administration officials that the higher amount would shatter the credit of the government.

Nerves on edges as the result of weeks of debate and controversy and their tempers short, senators blasted away at one another when Senator Bronson Cutting, republican, New Mexico, introduced an amendment to earmark $40,000,000 of the fund to finance schools for the remainder of the school year.

Tydings Assails Bill.
The proposal brought the bitter charge from Senator Millard Tydings, democrat, Maryland, that the entire bill "is not one of relief—it is a pork barrel bill." He protested that legislatures were not called upon to pass taxes to care for the education of their children.

Citing the vast amount of relief funds already poured into New Mexico and other states, Tydings shouted:
"In God's name, won't you ever cease? Is there not some stopping place?"

Senator Pat Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, showed a sharp-tongued head of the finance committee, was on his feet a moment later accusing the Maryland democrat of "poor statesmanship in what he described as 'biting the statesman's hand' each other and rural sections against cities."

"There is no place for sectionalism in this bill," he roared.
The amendment was adopted, 55 to 25.

Earlier in the day the senate had rejected an amendment by Senator Thomas Schall, republican, Minnesota, which would have forced the liquidation of all new corporations within 90 days.

The measure was revised so that territories of the United States could "bring suit against each other."

Atlanta Is Assured $480,000 Relief Fund

Atlanta's relief payments, aggregating $480,000 for the year, will be met. Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company and chairman of a special citizens' committee named by Mayor Key to negotiate refinancing of the city bonds due this year, officially notified the mayor's office Wednesday that a market for all the bonds has been found, and that the funds will be available as soon as needed.

The bonds bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent, and will be retired over a period of 10 years.

Nudism in Georgia Outlawed by House

The state house of representatives put its collective foot down on nudism in Georgia.

A measure, sponsored by Representative J. L. Weeks, of Columbia county, was passed by the house, 105 to 19, making it a misdemeanor for a person to operate a nudist camp or appearing in the nude.

The bill formerly was defeated because it made such an offense a felony, but passed when the penalty was changed.

Representative Weeks, who took the floor for the passage of his measure, said failure of enactment would mean Georgia soon would be full of nudists. He condemned burlesque shows and said those arrested recently in Atlanta's lone burlesque should be made to work at hard labor on the roads.

Forester Sees Slash Pine As Salvation of Farmer

Growing of yellow slash pine as a profitable farm crop is likely to prove the salvation of small farmers in Georgia, who are beginning to realize they can tend their forests and use the turpentine for their money crop, augmented by agricultural crops for food and additional money, according to F. A. Silcox, chief forester of the United States Forest Service.

Mr. Silcox, a native Georgian and member of a Pioneer Dixie family, was a visitor in Atlanta Wednesday after completing an inspection trip through national forests in a number of southern states. He was accompanied on the trip by Joseph Kircher, regional forester.

"A great opportunity exists in Georgia for the development of privately owned timber lands on a paying basis," the chief forester said. "Here, before the lumber companies and the small communities in the timber areas have been committing suicide together, for as fast as the timber was cut the lumber companies move on, abandoning taxable property and depriving the counties of a large portion of their revenue."

"Georgia has the greatest timber capacity of any state in the country. Yellow slash pine, for instance, can be grown in a remarkably brief period of time and can be made to pay even with a farmer who owns 600 acres of farm land, half of which is in pine. He and his two sons are working the timber crop just as they would any other crop, extracting the turpentine and other by-products. As a result, he has a steady cash income from that source in addition to revenues from agricultural products."

"Nothing in the pine tree is wasted. Even the needles and the stumps can be made to produce revenue. Much of the turpentine extract sold in this country comes from the pine tree, and there are numerous other by-products."

"The National Forest Service is willing at all times to advise farmers who desire to plant pine trees on a commercial basis, and I believe the time is coming when the small farmer of Georgia will look upon the trees as his salvation."

SENATE IN FRANCE VOTES TO RESIST NAZI ARMAMENT

vention by the League of Nations to save the peace of Europe.

The French government in this demanding a showdown on Adolf Hitler's bold scrapping of the Versailles treaty and his plan to rebuild the reich's military power, forced an international issue that may mean peace or war.

League and other circles were gravely concerned. It was realized that if the League makes specific demands and Germany rejects them the only alternative other than armed force—war—is for France to back down. Few expect she would accept such humiliation.

The note to Geneva was dispatched at 8:10 p. m. for publication there tomorrow morning. It was based on France's desire "to bring Germany" to see she cannot disregard her agreed obligations," a foreign office spokesman said at 11 p. m.

A special council meeting was demanded.

The spokesman confirmed earlier advice that the note was based on Article 11 of the League covenant, which gives members the right to call the League's attention to the threat of war. He denied France had any desire to apply Article 16, which carries sanctions (penalties) or demand Germany's banishment from the League.

The United Press learned that both France's Geneva representations—tantamount to a formal appeal for League action—and the note to Berlin drafted by the cabinet today, will require to accept Hitler's decision to organize an armed force of at least 500,000 men, in violation of the treaty.

The senate simultaneously gave Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin a vote of confidence on his plan to extend compulsory military service in France to two years, to keep the army up to present strength.

The United Press was informed that the theme of the note to Geneva will be that Germany through Hitler's gesture not only disobeys the treaty disarming the reich as a defeated power, but repudiates the subsequent understanding under which Germany agreed to substitute for Part V (military section) of the treaty a military statute to be negotiated under a general agreement for mutual security in Europe.

In support of her action, French authorities conferred with English and Italian officials. Both agreed to a three-party conference to be held in Paris on Saturday, when the former allies will discuss what further action to take to back up the protests on paper. Some of the more hot-headed are inclined to demand force and possibly re-occupation of the Rhineland, but generally it was believed action through Geneva would prevail.

The French note will tell Hitler that France at the moment sees no reason whatever to accept Germany's lone action in abandoning the treaty, and reserves the right to take all essential steps for security in full cooperation with her allies.

Germany will be called upon to respect the treaties she signed terminating the World War—with the implied threat that unless she does so of her own free will, sanctions may be taken, as provided in the treaties.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.) LONDON, March 20.—(P)—Great Britain, yielding to French and Italian insistence, today agreed to au-don diplomatic negotiations and send Captain Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, to Paris for the tripartite conference, to be held one day before Eden and Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, go to Berlin to confer with Adolf Hitler.

Although Simon will not participate in the Paris parley, Eden will, and will represent France, while Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary of state, will speak for Benito Mussolini.

A second meeting, to be held after Simon's and Eden's visit to Berlin and the latter's subsequent trips to Moscow and Warsaw, may be held in northern Italy, when Mussolini himself attends, dispatches from Rome said.

The French and Italian argument that the three powers' united views should be presented to Hitler found Britain sympathetic, although there was difference as to the method of arriving at that unity. Britain wanted to continue diplomatic exchanges; France and Italy demanded the conference, which the British believed might make even more difficult an already precarious situation.

Anxious to avoid excessive reaction in Berlin, the British decided that Simon should not go to Paris. They feared, however, that France's protest and appeal to Geneva would excite German hostility.

"GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY" PROJECTED BY F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(P)—A transatlantic extension of the "good neighbor policy" as the solution for Europe's acute military problems was projected today by President Roosevelt, while, on Capitol Hill, record-smashing national defense outlays totaling more than $1,500,000,000 were discussed.

Disarmament, the president told newspapermen, is a component part of his "neighbor policy," and, despite the crisis resulting from Germany's announcement of a determination to re-arm, the chief executive still held out hope for future arms limitation.

Meanwhile, the United States was brought into direct touch with the European situation for the first time, Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, summoned Ray Atherton, American charge d'affaires in London, and gave him an outline of Britain's position for transmission here.

At the same time, Secretary Swanwick told newspapermen the navy "was considering plans for building battleships after present limiting treaties expire and was not deviating from its program of laying down 78 smaller vessels by 1939."

Secretary Roper also entered the discussion that has swept about the world since Adolf Hitler's abrogation of the Versailles treaty with an assertion that "we're for peace," and an added statement that he did not "anticipate our getting into a war in the near future."

IL DUCE SEEKS UNITED FRONT WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE

ROME, March 20.—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini today invited France and England to a second three-power peace conference on Germany's rearmament in a new move to preserve a united front among the former allied powers.

The conference will be held somewhere in northern Italy, possibly near Straes or San Remo. The date remained indefinite, but it will be after the British mission, headed by Sir John Simon, visits Berlin.

The parley may be held up until after Captain Anthony Eden, of the British mission, visits Moscow and Warsaw, following the Berlin conversations on Sunday.

It was hoped that this second parley could be made more significant than the initial allied conference scheduled for just Saturday in Paris, and that the prime ministers of the three governments would journey to Italy for the meeting.

Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, of Britain, was reported to have reacted favorably to Mussolini's invitation to come to Italy personally. In this event, the French premier, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, also may attend.

LEAGUE SETS MARCH 28 FOR EXTRAORDINARY SESSION

GENEVA, March 20.—(P)—An extraordinary session of the League of Nations council to deal with France's appeal against German rearmament probably will be held Thursday, March 28.

The announcement came as military experts here, contemplating Germany's increasing ability to produce war supplies, said they considered the next six months the crucial period for Europe's peace.

Intense interest was shown in the French appeal, which some observers asserted contained potential dynamite, especially as to whether it will invoke article 213 of the Versailles treaty which binds Germany to facilitate any investigation of her armaments which the council, acting by majority vote, may consider necessary.

HITLER MARKS TIME: CONFERS WITH HIGHEST AIDES

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.) BERLIN, March 20.—(UP)—Adolf Hitler, pursuing a temporary policy of "watchful waiting" at the storm throughout Europe which his conscript army program has aroused, conferred privately with high Nazi officials today.

Der Fuehrer, who has maintained absolute official silence since his world-shaking announcement last Saturday, met his aides in Stuttgart for the parley—but left at noon for his retreat in the Bavarian alps without saying a word on the next plans.

The nation awaited the French note, due tomorrow, following up the British protest, with some misgivings. However, the "new era" of confidence which Hitler's military program has inspired almost overnight remains in evidence, and the people appear unworried about the allied program of calling their leader and themselves to task.

Rumors of renewed "Jew-baiting" as a result of this revived Germanic spirit were scotched at Nuremberg by the Franconian district leader, Julius Streicher, himself known as intensely anti-Jewish. He sharply ordered cessation of talk of a pogrom against the Jews which he said "arose from a rumor that the Jews had planned an attempt against Hitler."

In Berlin, the aerial maneuvers continued, the Krueberg section of the city witnessing the first of the "horrors of war attacks" from the air, staged by the Air Protection League.

RUSSIA SAID TO BE READY TO MOBILIZE 10,000,000 MEN

MOSCOW, March 20.—(UP)—The soviet union, thoroughly aroused by Germany's rearmament plans, is prepared to increase its 1,000,000-man power red army to 10,000,000 to preserve peace, if necessary, the official organ, Pravda, said today.

The newspaper asserted Russia was prepared to prevent Europe from being "the slave of German fascism."

The declaration was part of comment indicating soviet disgust at the "supineness of the British note to Germany" protesting Adolf Hitler's conscript policy.

Pravda even suggested the possibility that Great Britain might connive in the alleged German plans for carving up Europe.

VIENNA SEES PERMISSION FOR HER TO CONSCRIPT

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.) VIENNA, March 20.—(UP)—Austria, like Germany, shortly will get a national conscript army and considerable rearmament above the present treaty limits, the United Press was informed in official quarters tonight.

However, the spokesman said that Austria, unlike Germany, has no intention of taking abrupt, lone action in denouncing the military clauses of the peace treaty, preferring the consent first of her former enemies, now her friends.

The United Press was further informed that Austria already informally has sounded out the powers concerning the establishment of conscript service—but a favorable answer is being withheld until Austria's financial position can stand the increased expense.

INSURANCE AGENCIES URGED TO USE PAPERS

Agents at Miami Also Hear W. E. Harrington on State 'Monopolistic Funds.'

MIAMI, Fla., March 20.—(P)—A campaign to humanize the story of insurance for the general public through newspaper advertising was advocated today by Albert Dodge, of Buffalo, N. Y., speaking before the mid-year meeting of the National Association of Insurance Agents here.

Dodge, who is chairman of the committee on publicity and education of the organization, urged a campaign to "sell the public on stock insurance and the value of the local agent."

Under his plan, each company or agency would handle its own advertising campaign with the assistance of material for display matter and booklets from his committee.

Part of today's session was given over to presentation of reports by Walter Bennett, secretary-counsel, and William T. Reed Jr., assistant counsel.

Bennett declared the menace of unauthorized insurance would hang over the heads of the public until such time as congress passes legislation barring the mails to those engaged in the practice.

W. E. Harrington, of Atlanta, reporting as chairman of the workmen's compensation committee, asked the convention to express itself on whether the voluntary plan of insurance is preferable to "monopolistic state funds." He recommended the voluntary plan and his report received the convention's endorsement.

"SAVAGE!" Says PHOTOPLAY'S BEAUTY EDITOR

"SENSIBLE!" Says YOUR OWN DENTIST

BARBAROUS PICTURE, was the prompt verdict of Miss Carolyn Van Wyck, the beauty editor of Photoplay—"an offense against every code of manners—except perhaps those of darkest Africa."

But dentists take a radically different view. "I disagree flatly," would probably be your own dentist's sharp retort. "It's a bold and instructive photograph—and I'm glad to see it published. If modern people were less polite and more primitive about chewing, if all of us are more tough, coarse and fibrous foods, we'd hear a lot less about tender, ailing gums and 'pink tooth brush.'"

It's true... too true! Our modern menus, our civilized soft and super-refined foods, do rob our gums of work and health. They grow lazy... tender... sensitive. And though that eventual tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush is only a warning—it's a very serious one. It means definitely that you need Ipana and massage.

Your dentist knows the practical and protective value of Ipana and massage in the home care of the mouth. He knows that neglect of "pink tooth brush" may even lead to such serious disorders as gingivitis, Vincent's disease or pyorrhea.

Take his advice. Begin at once to massage your gums with Ipana every time you brush your teeth. Each time, rub a little extra Ipana on the gums. For Ipana with massage helps restore the gums to healthy firmness.

Start cleaning your teeth and massaging your gums with Ipana—today. Your teeth will be brighter, your gums firmer. And you can forget "pink tooth brush."

Fund for Zoo Is Mounting Slowly; Bengal Tiger Moved to Grant Park

Slowly the pile of zoo dimes, to be used in construction of Grant park homes for all the animals and birds given the city by Asa G. Candler, is mounting.

Wednesday night, 38,561.7 of the required 150,000 had been deposited with the treasurer of the fund, Lewis F. Gordon, at the Citizens & Southern bank on Marietta street.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson, Georgia emergency relief administrator, on Wednesday announced that $20,706 in labor has been appropriated for the new municipal zoo, which means that all the actual work to be done is provided, but the material, which calls for cash, must still be furnished from the voluntary contributions which are being asked of the general public.

It is purchase of this needed material that the 150,000 dimes must be collected. When that figure was estimated as cost of the project it was with the expectation that PERA labor would be provided, thus confirmation of this expectation on Wednesday does not lessen the imperative need that the mountain of dimes be built up to its full level of 150,000.

End of Strike Sought In NBC Conference

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—Representatives of the National Biscuit Company and its striking union employees started conferences here today to attempt to reach an agreement that would end the walkout.

National Labor Relations Board officials said 5,000 employees were on strike at New York, Philadelphia, York, Pa.; Newark, N. J., and Atlanta, Ga., plants.

Candler's zoo at Briarcliff have already been moved to new quarters and others will be transferred to Grant park as fast as their homes are prepared, which all depends on how fast the dimes roll in.

Latest to be moved to the park was a royal Bengal tiger, who made the trip across the city, without mishap, on Wednesday.

Contributors to the fund may send their gifts to any of the three Atlanta newspapers or direct to Mr. Gordon, the treasurer, at the Citizens & Southern bank.

DAVEY IS BACKED BY SOLONS IN OHIO

Joint Democratic Caucus Appeals to President for Full Probe.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 20.—(AP)—Aligning themselves solidly behind Governor Martin L. Davey in his relief controversy with Harry L. Hopkins, democratic members of the Ohio legislature appealed to President Roosevelt late today "to right the wrong which has been done our governor."

They adopted unanimously in joint caucus a resolution condemning "the gratuitous insult directed at our chief executive" by Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins, and pledged Davey "our allegiance . . . in his courageous fight against waste and inefficiency in the administration of relief."

The democrats acted after Francis W. Poulson, their state committee chairman, plunged into the Davey-Hopkins conflict and charged republicans in high government offices "have betrayed the president."

"As loyal democrats," the resolution said, "and as supporters of President Roosevelt, we do hereby call upon the president of the United States to make full and complete investigation, to right the wrong which has been done our governor and to forthwith do the things that are so urgently necessary to eliminate waste and inefficiency, and to terminate the in-

Aero Chamber Backs Howell Board Report

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 20.—(AP)—A major step will be made in the progress of aviation if recommendations of the federal aviation commission are carried out, Thomas A. Morgan, of New York, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, said here today.

"The industry is now vitally interested in developments that will follow these recommendations, which provide for stabilization," Morgan said.

"It also recognizes the necessity of the government having a far-reaching program and adequate production capacity to meet any national emergency."

"This commission under the chairmanship of Clark Howell, of Atlanta, made a searching inquiry into all phases of American aviation and proposed a program that if carried out by congress and the national administration will result in greater activity."

"As to the future of aviation, in my opinion we are just beginning to visualize its potential usefulness, economically and otherwise."

human practices of mistaken agents of the relief commission.

The "wrongs" alleged include Hopkins' charge that business firms seeking contracts with the state relief administration were "shaken down" for $8,000 by the governor's campaign committee. Davey retaliated with a suit for criminal libel against the relief chief and dared him to come to Ohio to stand trial.

A resolution deploring the controversy between Hopkins and the governor was adopted in the senate Tuesday.

Senator Paul P. Yoder, democrat, of Dayton, majority leader in the senate, asserted he did not know who drafted the resolution approved in the joint caucus. He said it was developed at a conference between himself, J. Freer Bittinger, democrat, speaker of the house "and others."

Rogers Food Show Exhibits Hold Interest of Crowds

Mrs. Ben Purse, above, will head the Atlanta Woman's Club committee of hostesses which will greet visitors at the fifth annual Rogers Food Show and Household Exposition tonight at the 230 Spring street building.

Only three more days remain before the fifth annual Rogers Food Show and Household Exposition, now in progress at 230 Spring street, passes into history, and Rogers officials are anticipating an attendance of approximately 100,000 during those three days.

Interest in the numerous exhibits at the show has exceeded even the expectations of John W. Gates, director of the show, who before its opening a week ago predicted that 300,000 persons would pass through the turnstiles during the 10 days of the spectacle.

"In all my 22 years of staging educational and entertainment spectacles such as this, I have never seen such interest," Mr. Gates said Wednesday.

SUN BLOTTED OUT BY DUST STORMS

Highway and Air Traffic Held in Abeyance by Record Phenomena.

By The United Press.

One of the worst dust storms in midwest history rolled across Kansas and Nebraska today, blotting out the sun, halting traffic and forcing people to stay within their homes.

At noon the dust storm swept into Missouri and Iowa, the easternmost point the storm had reached this year. There were no clouds in the sky in Kansas City at noon but the sun was obscured. Midday twilight existed at Omaha, Neb., bordering Iowa. At this hour the storm appeared to be abating in far western Kansas. One could see 500 feet at Dodge City, Kan., where earlier in the day the atmosphere was opaque.

But in central Kansas the storm reached unprecedented fury. So severe was the storm at Ellinwood, Kan., that roads were blocked and patrolmen refused to let motorists risk their lives on the highways.

The dust sifted across the upper half of Oklahoma, reaching Oklahoma City at noon to reduce visibility to one-half mile.

100-Foot Ceiling.

At 12:25 p. m. the visibility at Kansas City was one-fifth of a mile, declining to that figure from one-half mile within 10 minutes. The ceiling at Kansas City at 12:30 was less than 100 feet, and all airplane travel was ordered suspended throughout the midcontinent region.

From the United Press office at Kansas City on the third floor, it was impossible to see skyscrapers a quarter of a mile away. The weather bureau said it was the first dust storm ever to strike Kansas City.

Thousands of tons of dirt, in the form of fine particles, swept through the air. The wind died down and it settled to a depth of half an inch or less. It sifted into houses, office buildings and shops. It crunched underfoot. It got into the eyes, the clothing and in the hair of those on the streets. In the homes it was almost as bad. Wet shoes parked about door jams and window casings did little to keep it out.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., March 20.—(AP)—Fifteen relief workers, eight of them white men, were injured, three painfully, when a heavily laden trailer broke loose from a tow truck today and turned over an embankment near here.

Although none was believed seriously hurt, doctors were making X-ray examinations to determine their conditions at the Methodist hospital.

Hospital patients gulped in through wet cloths. Mail carriers went their routes with masks of wet handkerchiefs over their faces. The few women on Kansas City streets doffed spring coats to wrap them about their heads as they buffeted the grilling wind.

Most Kansas schools closed before noon. At Hutchinson, it was impossible for children to study because lights in school rooms would not pierce the dust which filtered through closed windows.

Merchants stripped display windows of merchandise, shut their doors and swathed their counters with protective sheets.

Weather forecasters said the tremendous dust cloud was moving eastward at 25 miles an hour. It was expected to reach Chicago tomorrow, unless checked by rain or snow.

Forecasters said that if the dirt-laden air encountered rain, a mud storm would result. Contact with the snow would result in the queer brown mixture of snow and dust which Kansans have dubbed "snust."

DUST CLOUDS VISITING EASTERN U. S. SEABOARD

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—The weather bureau said today the eastern seaboard was again being visited by clouds of dust picked up by winds in the western drought belt and carried thousands of miles.

Weather bureau officials estimated approximately 10 tons of dust was hanging over each square mile in the vicinity of Washington.

Motorists in and near the city were treated to a blanket of mud on automobiles during the showers which occurred last night.

Sub-Group Agrees On Tobacco Bill

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—A subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee today agreed on a bill to amend the existing law governing the grading and inspection of tobacco products.

An amendment which proposed to submit the grading plan to a referendum of growers was rejected, as was another amendment which would have placed the cost of grading on the government.

However, clarifying amendments were adopted, the chief being one to allow the measure, if adopted, would give the agriculture secretary power to close tobacco auction markets.

Representative Fulmer, democrat, South Carolina, said the measure would be reported to the whole committee as soon as it could be rewritten to include the clarifying amendments.

Pan-American Grooms Plane for Hawaii Hops

MIAMI, Fla., March 20.—(AP)—Another long-distance test flight of possibly 3,000 miles is to be started Friday by the Pan-American Clipper, 10-ton flying boat being procured for an experimental transport service to span the Pacific ocean from California to the far east by Pan-American Airways.

No definite route has been selected, but it is known the crew of six planes to fly the giant four-engine craft at least as far as St. Thomas in the Windward Islands and back to Miami without a stop.

During the trip, which will cover a distance greater than the 2,400 miles between California and Hawaii, the longest link in the proposed trans-Pacific route, efforts will be made to simulate conditions expected on that route.

Distribution of Tax Burden Urged in Talmadge Speech

Following is the text of Governor Talmadge's address Wednesday morning before the joint session of the Georgia general assembly in which he pleaded for more equitable distribution of the tax burden in the state:

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, Members of the General Assembly Ladies and Gentlemen:

When I received the invitation to address this honorable body on the tax problems of Georgia, I appreciated the opportunity to come and counsel with you.

I wish to state in the beginning that this is not a new problem. In 1933 I have already written into law measures to help the people of this state than any other 10 general assemblies combined since the Civil War.

I wish to state further that I have been watching the general assembly for the past 15 or 20 years, and I have never seen a general assembly work as earnestly as put in as much time on the problems that were before them than this general assembly has done.

I wish to thank WSB and WGST broadcasting stations for making it possible for us to deliver these short remarks to the people all over the state.

The session met in January, and about as soon as the constitutional limitation would allow, they have written into law a bill that relieved the people of this state from paying $10,000,000 on the automobile tax. They wrote a permanent law providing for the $3 tax, saving the people over $3,000,000 per year.

Deficiency Nearly Made Up.

A check on the gasoline tax paid into this state, with the increased use of automobiles will show that the deficiency in revenue has practically been made up with the increased use of automobiles, trucks and the increased use of gasoline in this state.

Along with this went jobs for thousands of people to fix tires, work around garages, sell gasoline and fix tires for automobiles.

The next great step by this general assembly was writing into law an order of suspension a little over a year ago reducing the utility rates of this state.

If this general assembly had not approved the suspension order, the utility rates for the people in Georgia would have been thrown into discard. This general assembly has also passed the $2,000,000 diversion bill, directing this money which was saved up in the overhead of the Highway Department for the noble purpose of paying in proportion the past due indebtedness to the Confederate pensioners and the counties of this state for school purposes.

I spoke to over 300,000 people in Georgia last year and stated to them that we had removed the old highway commissioners, and appointed three more men, requesting them to cut down their overhead and to save us the $2,000,000. For what? For the purpose of paying up the past due indebtedness to our Confederate pensioners and school teachers. Three hundred thousand people heard these words from my lips.

Urged Paying Teachers.

I argued with them, and told them of receiving letters from school teachers all over the state, some of whom had not been paid in over three years. I stated that I thought the school teachers of the state should be paid as promptly as any official in the state.

This bill came before you, and you saw fit to put an amendment in it that the funds should be paid out according to the Barrett-Rogers law.

It is the duty of the board of education, under the terms of that act, to ascertain what indebtedness is due, because it is to be paid in proportion to the school teachers, bus drivers, and the past due indebtedness of the common schools in this state in all the counties. And I wish to state that all complete information has not been received in the school department. I received a letter from Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, today, advising me of this fact.

Immediately after this law was passed, Dr. Collins got busy and notified the different counties to let the board of education know the status of their counties.

My countrymen, as soon as the executive department has time to study the bill, and check on the information, you need not doubt that this $1,500,000 will be paid out exactly according to the act that you passed.

Governor's Term Bill Lauded.

You passed another measure, far-reaching in its effects. It won't help me. Within a short while I will bid farewell to the executive office and the mansion. My days in politics will be over, but it will help the men who come after me.

It will help the state to elect a governor for a term of four years. Why, before I was hardly warm in the chair, there was talk around among certain groups of things they wanted me to do. They stated that opposition would come, but thanks to this general assembly the governor of 1936 will have about two or three years to look in which to carry out his campaign pledges to the people, and will not be busy campaigning all the time.

There is something else that you did which is far-reaching in importance, and that is the election of a lieutenant governor. Georgia has been fortunate in that none of her governors have died since Alexander Stephens. A lieutenant governor will be elected by the people—and another important point is that he will be president of the senate and appoint the committees where most legislation is controlled.

There have been other bills passed that will benefit the people of the state.

We said something last year about paying up the indebtedness of this state in two more years and not raising the taxes one dime. I think everyone in Georgia is familiar with this.

During the past two years, my fellow countrymen, we have been able to reduce the taxes of this state and pay up the $2,000,000 diversion over $1,000,000 indebtedness of the state. There is $2,400,000 more indebtedness that the state owes, besides the bonded indebtedness of less than $5,000,000, which we are retiring annually.

Promises Full Payment.

This $2,400,000 current indebtedness now due, if this general assembly will stick to the appropriation bill according to the budget originally submitted to you, and I do not ask you to stick to the items as set out, but if you will hold the amount of the budget to the amount submitted to you, by 1937 the indebtedness of the state will be paid out entirely, and you will not have to raise taxes on anything another dime.

But, my countrymen, does this solve the problem in every county and municipality in the state? Does this solve the problem which every county paper carries in every issue when you see tax sales going on in every county and municipality from Tennessee to Florida?

Does this solve the issues when the county commissioners tell you that some of the best farmers in your county have not paid their taxes in three years?

Does this solve the same issues here in Atlanta when you see the number of tax sales every month of business houses, residences, and property of every kind? It does not. Ladies and gentlemen of this general assembly, if we can reach out and solve this problem that I am approaching now, this general assembly will go rinding down the ages for a hundred years.

At the first of the session we heard an illuminating speech that was like a fresh breeze across a field from Senator Huey Long. He said: "Share the wealth," and we all enjoyed hearing him talk about sharing the wealth.

Wants Taxes Shared.

I'll tell you what I want to see shared by all of our citizens. I want to see the tax burdens shared by all of them.

Listen, it is the law now in Georgia that every note, every mortgage, every stock and bond except municipal and county bonds, and state bonds, be returned to the tax receiver and put on the tax books, and assessed just like all the other property. This is the law of Georgia now. Not only the notes, stocks, bonds and mortgages, but all of the cash money.

It is the law today for a man who returns his mules, hogs, cows, household and kitchen furniture, to return his cash money and stocks and bonds. But what have we drifted into?

We have drifted into the habit of allowing the people not to return them, and signing it, and everyone knows that they are not returning them.

Right here in Atlanta, piled high in the vaults of the city banks are millions of dollars, and doesn't it cost the government something to protect this money? Does it not cost something to have policemen there, and fire protection to protect this?

What is the most expensive thing to protect your rights in the county? What are most of the suits about? You lawyers know—it is the intangible and invisible property.

putting a limitation on the intangible property. That is all, and nothing more.

It means putting a limitation on intangible property. What does it mean if it is made effective? You can cut a tax dodger down to five or ten mills, and you still will not get them unless you put teeth in the law.

When that constitutional amendment is adopted by the people, I want you to come back here and put teeth in this intangible law and make them have to register notes, mortgages, and stocks, and go further and provide for all the money deposited in the postoffices to get on the tax books.

Some people sit back and say that it is politics. I am not talking about a strict subject. You can drive through the counties and beautiful towns and meet coupon clippers, and they will say that it is politics, and laugh. And about election time, they say, "It is a real trip, you will find them doing it. Why? Because their names are not on the tax books."

Make "Citizens" of Them.

Let's make citizens out of our tax dodgers. Let's go further than that—let's make ward healers of them. Let's get interested in elections. We'll tell you this: That the desire to create more government, more boards and bureaus, and raising government officials' salaries comes from the most influential of all tax dodgers, because they know that they are exempt from these taxes. But if you will talk to the man who is at work, trying to give people jobs and pay his taxes, and ask him about creating an extra board or bureau, or raising some government official's salary, what will he say? He will say, "Cut it," because he is helping to pay it.

Before you begin to classifying intangibles, what limitation will you put on a 3 per cent or 4 per cent bond? When you begin to put on the cash that is laid away in the vault or the postoffice? It will be your job.

You cannot put a confiscatory limit on it. You must put a limit on it that will live and let live. Now, listen, the reason the valorem limit is set at 10 mills on land and visible property is to keep from getting the proportion too wide between visible and invisible, or tangible and intangible. Don't get it too wide apart.

I wish to say this: There is justification in the argument for a difference. You cannot arrive at the exact worth of the building across the street. You cannot arrive at the exact worth of a bunch of hogs, or cows or mules. This is a matter of judgment.

Before hard times, it was returned at 60 per cent, but since hard times, it was returned at 120 per cent of its value.

Return From Soil.

In normal times, and I wish to say that they are coming back in good old Georgia, its soil property handled, will return more than the investment than a 3 per cent or 4 per cent bond.

I wish to say again in stumbling on this idea, I came back and found that we are not pioneers. Other states have a 10-mill overall limit. Texas went to the bat on it, and Florida is fighting for it today, and the question is going on in Florida that they must completely revise the tax system there.

In that middle section of Florida, there are men there at work just like they are here in Georgia. They work to produce the vegetables, oranges, and truck stuff that we see coming through Georgia, and they realize that what they need is "share the burden" even in that state, and exempt no one.

It is amusing to look at the tax rate in Georgia by counties. It runs from 3 mills for strictly county purposes, to 26 mills.

This is for county purposes. I was talking to a citizen yesterday, a former senator and representative in his district of Ideal, in Macon county, that he has a bond issue for school purposes, and the valuation of the property had decreased to where there is 8 mills for bonding indebtedness, and 5 mills for school purposes, and 5 mills for county purposes, making a total of 18 mills for the schools of Macon county.

On top of this they have a county rate of 8 mills.

And Ideal is an incorporated town of the state, where they have a city tax of 18 mills.

This is where we are driving in Georgia.

Promises Extra Session.

Put your limitation on the tangible property, and if I am your governor, as soon as this intangible act is voted on, you will be called back here, and then we will go after it and work it out.

I believe that if all of the property in Georgia, the tangible and the intangible, is put on our tax books and we know that it is there, we won't need much more taxes.

If we do need more, who would you rather risk to provide for than yourself? You have the opportunity. Who would you rather risk than yourselves?

Ah, the other day a distinguished delegation from one of the largest cities in the state called at my office and was interested in a bill to get a $4,000,000 corporation in Georgia for papermaking purposes, and wanted to exempt them from taxes for 15 years.

I am interested in these industries coming here. We have the best property, the best climate, and the best people in the world. But no trick legislation will get them. They don't figure on 15 years, they figure on 50 or 100 years. If you will write into the common laws of our state a constitutional limitation on the tangible property, you will see the manufacturers coming out of the north and east to Georgia. You will hear the wheels spin, and we will have industries all over this state.

Georgia's current debt is $2,500,000; her bonded indebtedness is less than $5,000,000. Georgia is in the best shape of any state in the Union.

Bonds Sell High.

Georgia bonds sell higher than any other bonds. City of Savannah bonds are at 132. Atlanta at 125, and no sale. This is the enviable position we hold while some of our neighboring states' bonds have gone begging at 50 per cent of the property value.

Let's not turn around. Let's lead another state in the United States.

The United States has its eyes on Georgia. Georgia is sane—Georgia is sane.

Intangibles Levy Backed.

Here's my idea: Yesterday the conference committee reported to the house and senate that they had passed an amendment classifying intangible and invisible property. The house and senate acted on it.

This is a constitutional amendment, and it will be submitted to the people—and it should be done. What does this mean? It means

Callaway Says His Mills Operating on Full Time

No Vacancies Exist, But 1,100 Have Applied for Jobs; Asserts Strike Did Little Harm.

Cason Callaway, president of the Callaway Mills, of LaGrange, was in Atlanta Wednesday on business, returning home last night.

With reference to the walk-out three weeks ago at the Callaway Mills, President Callaway said:

"We have been running with full complement of employees for over a week and now have over 1,100 applicants for positions to whom we are unable to give jobs, there being no vacancies."

Mr. Callaway was asked if the operators who walked out had been dispossessed of their houses. He said, "No, they had not even been given notice to move even though this is working some hardship on the new operators who are now on the job."

Mr. Callaway stated that while the rent contracts in many cases called for vacancy of the houses within five days after notice, he hoped to make arrangements whereby all would be given 30 days' notice. Mr. Callaway said that the new employees have been very co-operative in their makeshift places in which to live, giving those former operators of the mills who are no longer in the employ of the company as much time as possible to make arrangements.

Asked about his loss in production from the walk-out, Mr. Callaway said that in no week was the production impaired over 20 per cent in comparison with the past several weeks' schedule and that except for the one week of the walk-out production had been normal in every respect. He said that a large number of the hands who took the places of those who left had previously worked for the mills, having been laid off from time to time due to business conditions.

TELEPHONE PROGRESS IS NOT AN ACCIDENT...

In your lifetime, there have been many changes in the telephone system. The telephone was born in the United States, and here it has reached its greatest perfection.

You have watched the open wire pole lines dwindle, as wires have gone into protective cables.

The number of Bell System telephones has grown steadily: 1900, one million; 1910, four millions; 1920, eight millions; 1934, thirteen millions.

Long distance lines have spread from city to city, and in recent years radio telephone circuits have brought the world to your telephone door.

The speed of long distance connections has increased, until today most calls are completed while you hold the line.

And despite this growth and added complexity, the cost of the service has been kept low.

Such progress is not an accident. It is because telephone workers are trained and capable—engineering, research, plant, commercial, executive, traffic—and because they have in them the desire to serve in keeping with their expressed aim: "The most service to the public and the best, at the least cost consistent with financial safety."

AD CLUB WILL HEAR NEW YORKER'S TALK

F. L. Wertz To Speak to Members Today on "Windows for Profit."

Frederick L. Wertz, president Window Advertising, Inc., New York city, will be the principal speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Advertising Club in Rich's tea room at 12:30 o'clock today. "Windows for Profit," will be the subject of his address, according to an announcement by Robert E. Martin, president of the club.

In addition to the regular membership of the club, invitations have been extended to all of the display managers in Atlanta, and anyone interested in window advertising will be a welcome guest at this meeting.

Mr. Wertz is one of the best known men in the country in the field of display advertising. He has had an interesting career, having been born in Illinois and having gone later to Nebraska at a time when covered wagons were still the principal means of transportation.

He was raised on a farm in Nebraska; attended school at the University of Omaha; graduate of New York University Law School, and published newspapers in Nebraska for a number of years in the early 1900s.

He came to New York in 1907, and has since engaged in sales and advertising counsel work, specializing for the past several years in window display. During the past year has spoken on "Windows for Profit" before the advertising clubs of Chicago, Baltimore, Cincinnati and other cities.

Mr. Martin will preside at the meeting and he urges a large attendance from the members of Atlanta's advertising craft.

nature... and can with ready grace back out when necessary.

While posing he chats... Once he made one request to a portrait painter that he do not make him look like a conductor wearing his Sunday suit.

To his caricaturist this: "Have all the fun you want... I am willing to lend my face if it will keep your business going... We'd be a dull people if we couldn't have a laugh."

Ottley appears pleasant... and one wonders which is his habitual expression... He ups and says: "It all depends on what's going on."

Origin may be an influence... He is Scotch and Welsh... It is known to one and all that he is a Columbus (Miss.) boy who made good in the big city.

It's a habit of artists... In order to perceive the structural characteristics of his head "in mass" I squint my eyes... He laughs and asks: "Does it hurt that much to look at me?"

Ottley reads much... Once he read standard books... Now it's detective stories... As a matter of pure diversion, he confesses, "I'll even descend to read wild west stories."

A very affable fellow John K... Born in '88 he somehow holds on to his youthful outlook. People call him a fine banker... As a model he's "swell."

All the paths of glory lead to caricature... If you'll allow, here's a banker in parody... He smiles as he signs it... Without benefit of compound interest—he can "take it."

Harvard Plans Exemption.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(UP)—A proposal for development of outstanding research centers at Harvard in the fields of applied mechanics, sanitary engineering and high-voltage, by expansion of the present laboratories and the addition of new ones, has been made by Harry E. Clifford, of the Harvard Engineering school.

Hearing was indefinitely postponed on legality of subpoena issued by the Security and Exchange Commission of the United States, calling for production of records in an investigation by that body. Since the case has been put in the hands of the department of justice an investigation by the commission at this time would be largely superfluous.

Receivers stated Wednesday they had discovered a small amount of additional cash assets of the company on deposit in New Orleans. The sum was approximately $500, making a total in assets thus far found of about $10,000, including balances in Atlanta banks and with local stock brokerage houses.

SON OF TY COBB DENIES 'IMPROPER ADVANCES'

REDWOOD CITY, Cal., March 20. (AP)—Hershey Cobb, 18-year-old son of Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach of baseball fame, denied the witness stand in justice court here today that he had made any improper advances to Miss Jean Conner, 10-year-old school girl. He is charged with battery.

Young Cobb declared the girl, on the night of the alleged attack, willingly accompanied him and another couple to his cabin. Only once, he testified, did she ask to be taken home and he complied immediately.

Miss Conner alleged Cobb struck her, blackening both eyes and causing her other injuries.

CONSECRATION VOWS STRESSED BY SMITH

Gipsy Smith Jr., speaking before his usual packed house at the First Presbyterian church Wednesday night, delivered a stirring sermon on the need for Christians to live up to their vows of consecration.

The son of the internationally famous evangelist made an appeal to professed Christians to rededicate themselves rather than to urge the initial acknowledgment of Christ.

"If people were really baptized by the Holy Spirit, their power for good would be so strong that there would be no need for evangelists," said the speaker. "If the members of churches were truly baptized with the Holy Spirit, their influence for good would shake the nation."

The evangelist took his text from the story of the healing of Naaman, the leper, and drew a fine analogy from the ravages of leprosy and the influence of sin.

"Leprosy and sin are closely akin," he said, "in that they both start from a small spot, but easily spread to ruinous proportions. And they both separate man from his rightful place in the world."

Final appearances of the evangelist will be made today, Friday and Sunday, with sermons at 11 o'clock in the morning and at 7:45 o'clock at night. Friday night will be given over to an account of the gypsy people and how Christ came into His own gypsy camp.

BOND, SHARE DATA GIVEN TO BOYKIN

ceivership Wednesday announced they would oppose a petition in bankruptcy reported filed in the United States district court at Wilmington, Del., by three women claiming to be unsecured creditors of the corporation.

It was pointed out that the name of one of these petitioners is the same as that of the manager of the Wilmington office of the corporation, and Roy Drumm, attorney for the petitioner here, expressed the view the Delaware action might be an attempt to supersede the receivers appointed by the state court here.

The Delaware petitioners are listed as Louise D. Nourse, Mary Lou Douglass and Madeline T. Carlisle, while the name of the manager of the Wilmington office is given as Mrs. Nourse. The Securities and Exchange Commission of the United States has subpoenaed Mrs. Nourse to appear before an examiner to testify regarding financial condition of the company.

Judge John P. Nields, of the federal court there, is passing upon the legality of that subpoena, it is stated. Meanwhile the investigation being conducted by the federal grand jury here continues, with a constant stream of witnesses, including investors in one or other of the four affiliate corporations and employees of the institution, appearing all day long.

Lawrence S. Camp, district attorney who is conducting the investigation before the jury, said it would probably continue at least another week. All investors who have lost funds are asked to appear to testify and the jury will continue the probe as long as necessary to hear everyone and secure all facts in the case.

U. S. Receiver Not Named.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood in federal district court here Wednesday deferred appointment of a federal receiver asked for in a petition for bankruptcy filed some days ago. He stated he felt the receivers appointed by the state court were already in charge of the offices and records of the corporation and therefore no urgent need for appointment of a federal receiver.

Hearing was indefinitely postponed on legality of subpoena issued by the Security and Exchange Commission of the United States, calling for production of records in an investigation by that body. Since the case has been put in the hands of the department of justice an investigation by the commission at this time would be largely superfluous.

Receivers stated Wednesday they had discovered a small amount of additional cash assets of the company on deposit in New Orleans. The sum was approximately $500, making a total in assets thus far found of about $10,000, including balances in Atlanta banks and with local stock brokerage houses.

325,000,000 Pounds of Cotton Purchased by Sears Each Year

By JOHN DODD.

When Paul D. MacQuiston, retail store manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., invited the oversigned to witness a preview of a picture that was shown to all Sears employees and invited guests Wednesday night at their Ponce de Leon avenue store, the bid was accepted with eagerness. He had witnessed Mr. MacQuiston's previous before—they have usually been pictures of Ozark Ripley in action—pictures that thrilled the heart of every follower of Frank Walton.

No Mickey Mouse is necessary when one of these popular films is flashed on the screen.

Mr. MacQuiston, when giving the invitation, confessed it was not an Ozark Ripley picture and there was no Mickey Mouse, but he thought it would prove enjoyable. I went. I saw it. I enjoyed it.

Many things of interest were learned. First, during the three depression years, 1930, 1931, 1932, in case you have forgotten the depression, Sears alone purchased each year 325,000,000 pounds of cotton. And does the south raise cotton? Second, Sears has approximately 15,000,000 customers scattered throughout the United States and has upward of 50,000 employees. Third, this vast organization makes purchases from 6,200 factories located in 1,082 cities. Fourth, Sears paid an average of $8.87 a pound for its cotton, for state, county and federal taxes. Fifth, Sears and its employees made contributions of $2,704,080 in 1930, 1931, 1932 for relief. Sixth, Sears uses more than 800 newspapers in the United States to acquaint Americans with Sears' values.

And all the foregoing was just a starter. For instance, Sears pays to resident Georgia employees an average of $3,368.674 a year. It spends for newspaper advertising space in Georgia the sum of $286,021 a year. It pays in rents and taxes in Georgia $640,201 each year. It buys from Georgia manufacturers located in 14 Georgia cities an average total each year of $6,144,663, worth of merchandise.

And their total average expenditure each year in Georgia during the three depression years was approximately each year the sum of $11,148,338.

"What was the total average annual expenditure for merchandise bought by the entire Sears organization during the depression?" we asked. "One hundred eighty-five million dollars a year," Mr. MacQuiston replied, and added, "less than 1 per cent of this amount was purchased outside the United States."

The discovery of the burglary was made Wednesday morning when persons who were to arrange the house for Mrs. Candler's return today found the window broken and the house in a state of upheaval.

Mrs. Asa G. Candler Sr., who has been vacationing in Miami for the last two months, will return to her home at 905 Springdale road, today to find that during her absence, thieves broke in and completely ransacked the home.

W. O. Parker, DeKalb chief of police, stated that the thieves broke in the house through a side window Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, and though they made a complete search of the home, the amount of the loot could not be estimated, he said.

G.O.P. CITES RELIEF AS BONUS EXCUSE

"Roosevelt's Extravagance" Held Responsible for Consideration of Bills.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—House Republicans employed the $2,000,000,000 bonus issue as the springboard for a concerted jump today upon what they termed "the extravagance program of the president."

The biggest G. O. P. jumper—from the standpoint of rank—was Representative Taber, of New York, highest republican on the appropriations committee which controls federal expenditures.

"This bill is out here on the floor because of the extravagance program of the president," he said. "It is out here because instead of conserving the resources of the country, instead of reducing the expenses of the government, we have embarked on the promotion of all kinds of wild schemes which have provided no relief from unemployment and have increased the expenditures of the government from $4,000,000,000 to $8,500,000,000 a year."

"Frankly, I do not blame the soldier boys for asking for their payment now."

One of the few outspoken opponents of cash bonus payment, Taber struck at the very point that is worrying a lot of democrats who would like to follow the president. In the last congress, the most effective argument against paying the $2,000,000,000 bonus was that it would upset federal financial policies. Now it is argued that if the government can spend $4,800,000,000 for public works and relief it can spend $2,000,000,000 to buy up adjusted compensation certificates.

A vote on how to pay the bonus was at least 48 hours away, so many members today avoided the wearying hours of debate and worked in their offices. Only a scattering 150 or so were on the floor. Even Frank N. Belgrano Jr., national commander of the American Legion, did not spend all his time in the gallery.

Other debaters centered around three points: Whether the bonus should be paid with new currency, as is provided in the Patman bill; with an appropriation from the treasury, as is provided in the Vinson bill, or whether with negotiable bonds, as is provided in the Tydings-Andrews-Cochran-McReynolds plan.

At his White House press conference a few hours earlier, the president replied with a quick "no comment" when asked his opinion of the bond method of payment.

Sutton Is Silent

On Board Charges

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and his supporters on the board of education, remained silent Wednesday on proposed plans of a majority of the board to curtail Sutton's power and to make several administrative changes in the conduct of the school system.

Those contemplating the change, although refusing to be quoted publicly, asserted their only interest "is to emancipate the teachers and other employees of the board from any dominance by factions or groups."

They said that in the past teachers have been forced to "join certain organizations, subscribe to certain magazines, etc., and to be puppets of certain systems."

It was not expected Wednesday that any effort to hold a special called meeting will be made, but that the issue will face the board at its next meeting, slated for 3 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, April 9.

The Boudeleon Dramatic Club of Westminster Presbyterian church will present "The Wistful Widow" at 8 o'clock tonight and Friday night in the Sunday school room of the church, corner Boulevard and Ponce de Leon avenue.

The Boudeleons, through their successful previous performances, have become one of the best known amateur theatrical groups in the city, and "The Wistful Widow," which is a light, modern comedy, promises to equal its predecessors as interesting and wholesome entertainment.

'INFLUENCE' IS HINTED IN S. C. APPOINTMENTS

Senate Debates Naming of Conferees on Appropriation Bill.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 20.—(AP)

A proposal to have senate conferees on the appropriation bill elected rather than appointed aroused three hours of raging debate in the senate tonight during which it was suggested that Governor Johnston might have sought to influence appointments.

While intimations that the governor had conferred with Lieutenant Governor J. E. Hardy on proposed appointments met a partial denial, the name of the state executive was brought into the argument repeatedly.

The senate recessed overnight without taking action upon the proposal or a report of a special committee for the passage of a state liquor store measure which conflicted in three respects with requirements laid down by the governor for his approval of a liquor bill.

Notice of the house's refusal to concur in senate amendments raising the annual money measure by nearly $500,000 was before the chamber at the time, but it did not get around to insisting upon its amendments and concluding the procedure for a free conference.

Senator Sims, of Orangeburg, chairman of the rules committee, moved at the beginning of the night session that the rules be changed "as a permanent policy" to have two free conferees on appropriations elected by the senate to serve with its finance committee chairman instead of being appointed by the lieutenant-governor.

TENNESSEE STUDIES APPROPRIATION BILL
NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 20.—(UP)—Tennessee's legislative recess committee today considered for final approval the complete draft of the body's biennial appropriation bill, providing for expenditure of $21,433,141 by state departments during the next two fiscal years.

The total appropriation is $1,595,037 less than that for the current biennium and includes deficit of $1,486,546, based on estimated revenues from present taxation sources.

The committee has recommended enactment of new taxes to yield more than $2,000,000 annually.

The tentative measure places stringent regulations upon operations of state automobiles and defines as a misdemeanor the authorization by a state official for expenditures in excess of the legislative appropriation. It provides that the state may recover from bondsmen in case of such expenditures.

so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—

"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Have a Chesterfield—

For one thing—they're milder.

For another thing—they taste better.

It was a matter of pride with a host in Colonial days that his guests should smoke tobacco grown on his own plantation.

LOUIS WILEY, 65, DIES IN NEW YORK

Business Manager of New York Times Was Widely Known.

NEW YORK, March 20.—(AP)—Death ended today the career of Louis Wiley, for 25 years business manager of the New York Times.

Mr. Wiley, who at 65 years was widely known in both business and editorial departments of journalism, died after eight days of convalescence following an operation. Cause of death was cited by the attending surgeon as a cerebral thrombosis.

During his life Mr. Wiley was honored with decorations by several European governments. He numbered among his friends many figures high in American politics and journalism.

Less than two months ago the Society of the G. W. C. which he founded, celebrated jointly its thirty-sixth annual dinner and the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Wiley's entrance into journalism.

On that occasion President Roosevelt wrote, in part: "The society founded by you so many years ago has made noteworthy progress during its existence. Your organization has gone a long way in enriching and bettering the social and economic life of the people of the Genesee society."

Tributes Paid.

Tributes on that occasion were also paid to Mr. Wiley by the Hon. Charles Borden, former prime minister of Canada; Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Adolph Ochs. Among the speakers were James H. Sheffield, former ambassador to Mexico, and James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany. He was initiated into his profession by Theodore Stuart, editor of the Democrat, published in Mount Sterling, Ky.

At 16 he became a reporter on the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal on a salary of "something less than $16 a week."

He went from the Journal to the Union and Advertiser of Fort Wayne and eventually came to the Fort Wayne Post Express.

After having worked on Rochester (N. Y.) newspapers he came to New York, where he "sought and fought to join the New York Times" in 1896. "Wagon to Star."

"I hitched my wagon to a star," he once said. "The time the Times have proved that this star was the mightiest in the journalistic heavens."

Adolph Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, recalled on the occasion of Mr. Wiley's sixtieth birthday: "Shortly after I had rescued the Times—then a derelict about to sink with a gallant crew of able journalistic seamen—a sprightly young man, still in his twenties, called on me and sought a position with the organization."

"I was of necessity moving cautiously in adding to the staff, because of the expense, and was not very receptive to his overtures. But the talent that he has since developed to a pre-eminent degree asserted itself and, as usual, what he went after, he secured."

"Mr. Wiley accepted, a modest position and a modest salary."

"It was one of the best trades I ever made."

SACRAMENTO, Cal., (UP)—Shirley Temple motion picture prodigy, who recently won the palm from the Motion Picture Academy, can go on the stage if the state legislature approves legislation which was introduced for her benefit. Bills reducing the age limit for permitting children to make stage appearances, confronted the legislature this month.

One measure reduces the eight-year limit to five and another for four-year-olds. Shirley, her employers claim, is five.

Carvings by Mountain Girl Placed on Exhibition Here

Miss Oma Pitts, Georgia mountain girl and graduate of the Berry school, is shown at her work bench, where with nimble fingers and a pen knife she turns out remarkable miniatures of early American furniture. The miniatures are carved from bits of mountain laurel.

An excellent example of the work of the Berry school in developing untalented is seen in the wood-carving and carving display of Miss Oma Pitts, Georgia mountain girl, which is being shown on the fourth floor of Davidson-Paxon Company's store through Friday.

Working with an ordinary penknife, a bottle of glue and bits of mountain laurel wood, Miss Pitts has produced a remarkable exhibit of miniature early American furniture, perfect in the minutest detail. Further samples of her handiwork include a mud-chinked log cabin furnished with her own fittings, including tiny dishes, rugs, chairs, fireplace accessories and a colonial lamp.

Several exhibits of what the artist would designate genre show women about their daily chores of spinning, carding and weaving. The little figures are all perfectly costumed and are very life-like in posture.

Of particular educational and artistic interest is a set of 24 figurines dressed in crepe paper, showing costumes dating from 2300 B. C. to the present time. The Roman stola and girdle, the elaborate panniers of the eighteenth century, the hoop skirts of the American eighties and the Puritan costumes of 1640 vie for attention with bizarre effects in the headpiece of a Pagan lady of 1386 and the hobbie-skirt of 1912.

Miss Pitts, under the direction of Mrs. Blanche Martin, home economics instructor at Berry school, where the mountain girl was graduated, completed the 24 historical figures in one semester. She later pursued the work as a hobby at Rihart College at Waleska, where she was graduated.

"It's barrels of fun," says Miss Pitts, "and if you think you'd like it, get a knife, some glue and laurel or what we call 'Hawwood' in the mountains, and go to it."

Miss Pitts' work was brought to the attention of Davidson-Paxon Company by Mrs. Paul Jones, of Canton, Ga., and Charles F. Naegele, the portrait painter, who has highly commended her talent.

get into the system of the patient and brought quicker relief from chills and fever that accompany the malady. Separate treatments were worked out for tertian or quartan malaria found in the northern Georgia hill country and aestivo-autumnal, or usual tropical malaria, in the southern part of the state.

The experiments were conducted by Dr. D. L. Seckinger, epidemiologist of the state department of health. "The beneficial effects of both treatments is probably accountable for the lower infection rates among those individuals originally negative in the treated area, as compared with a similar group in the untreated area," Dr. Abercrombie said.

Likewise, the percentage of those who were originally negative and remained negative throughout the two-year period was considerably greater in the treated area as compared with a similar group in the untreated area. These observations are of considerable public health importance in the control of malaria.

At the end of a two-year study he said that among school children in the area the infection had been reduced from 80.1 per cent to 10 per cent, compared with 60.3 per cent for an adjoining untreated area.

SELF-SUPPORTING RELIEF, AIM IN N. Y.

Finances Would Be Put on Pay-as-You-Go Basis by Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 20.—(AP)—In the future, New York hopes to put its relief finances on a pay-as-you-go basis.

With the state bonded past the $100,000,000 mark for relief purposes, the legislature plans to have relief pay its own way when the bond money is exhausted this year.

It expects business revival will make it possible to meet relief needs henceforth from state revenues alone. Rushing emergency aid when the pinch began to be felt in 1931, New York appropriated $25,000,000 for relief. It was the first state to leap into the breach and set up a state temporary emergency relief administration, which was ready later to receive and distribute federal funds.

However, the state asked in return that the jobless on relief give value received and contribute their labors toward construction of permanent state public improvements.

With New York's TEERA as a model, the national administration under President Roosevelt, who as governor of New York saw the inception of the plan, established the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Beginning in 1931, the state sent funds into cities and villages to improve highways, parks, public buildings, schools, create "white collar jobs and furnish jobs with an income while 'sprucing up' the state in a manner unprecedented in history. In this, the state paid 75 per cent of the cost, the localities the other 25 per cent.

In New York city the state pays 25 per cent, the city 25 per cent, and the federal government 50 per cent.

With New York already managing its own relief administration, Washington found it ready to accept federal sums at once.

There is no state-wide federal relief agency operating in New York in the same sense that federal agencies exist in other states. In 1931, when President Roosevelt was governor, the state TEERA was created.

Subsequent developments were: 1932—$30,000,000 bond issue. 1933—$60,000,000 bond issue. 1934—$40,000,000 bond issue.

Aiming at the plan to have relief pay its own way the legislature this year appropriated $10,000,000 in its general fund. Next year any necessary relief appropriation can be made from state revenues, it is planned.

Federal funds began to flood the state in February, 1933, and the fiscal year ending in June show the following grants:

1933—$32,932,282. 1934—$79,792,000. 1934 to Date—$170,842,101.

In January 562,195 persons received home relief, an increase of 23,133 persons over December.

armed, and a pitched battle threatened.

To prevent bloodshed, the Leflore county sheriff appealed for national guard troops to take charge of the situation, and the troops were immediately ordered out by Governor Sennett Comer.

Threats to blow all levees along the Tallahatchie river have been heard for weeks. Several weeks ago a levee on Black bayou was dynamited sending a flood of water into the Quiver river territory. The dynamite spirit flared again today, and a crowd of men were said to have been organized this afternoon with intention to move on down the river dynamiting levees as they came to them.

Filt at Moonshine Stills Is Described by Inspector

Two attacks on corn liquor and official stressing revolting sanitary conditions under which whisky is made, and the other by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood, who declared that homes and farms of moonshiners would be levied on by the government to collect fines assessed for making corn whisky, were made Wednesday.

W. K. Johnston, inspector in charge of the Alcohol Tax Unit in Georgia, declared that more corn liquor is consumed in Atlanta than in any other city in the south and then went on to tell of the indescribable filth in which such whisky is made.

Judge Underwood, in sentencing Carl Thomas, of Rockdale county, to pay a fine of $300 and serve a six-month jail sentence for making corn liquor, pointed out that a fine is mandatory and a tax on the liquor found is automatic. Consequently, any property possessed by violators of the internal revenue law must be sold to satisfy the tax due the government and also to pay fines levied.

"Atlanta contains more corn liquor than any other city in the south, but if they knew how it was made they could confine themselves solely to tax-paid whisky made in reliable distilleries," Mr. Johnston said.

"I have conducted raids on Georgia moonshine stills and have found filth six inches deep on top of the open fermenters used by the moonshiners. It is nothing unusual to find maggots, yellow jackets and even dead snakes in the fermenters, and on one occasion we even discovered a dead hog."

Furthermore, negroes are generally employed to tend the stills and often we find them to be suffering from serious social diseases. In almost every instance, these negroes are by no means clean.

"Furthermore, in order to speed up phone, 'and set off a terrific blast' He said there were 400 men in the party. Other reports estimate the crowd at between 200 and 300 persons.

New Ammunition Shows Results In War Against Malaria in Georgia

A new kind of ammunition to combat malaria was described here Wednesday by Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Georgia health director, who said the required time to bring a case under control had been reduced from several weeks to five days.

Dr. Abercrombie's report was made at the annual meeting, at which Robert F. Maddox, of Atlanta, was re-elected chairman and Dr. M. M. Head, of Zebulon, was named vice chairman.

Dr. Abercrombie said the treatment, involving the use of two relatively new specific, atabrine and plasmoquine, had produced revolutionary results in a highly infected area of a south Georgia county.

At the end of a two-year study he said that among school children in the area the infection had been reduced from 80.1 per cent to 10 per cent, compared with 60.3 per cent for an adjoining untreated area.

He said the treatment destroyed more rapidly the active parasites that get into the system of the patient and brought quicker relief from chills and fever that accompany the malady. Band From Ethiopia Seizes Italian Camels

ROME, March 20.—(AP)—Dispatches to Rome today from Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, said a strong armed group from Ethiopia raided Italian territory and made off with 100 camels belonging to Italians near Asale.

The raiders were unidentified but were believed by the Italians to have been Ethiopians. An Italian force pursued the group from a point between Forts El Sic and Gordoli to the frontier, but the raiders escaped into Ethiopian territory.

Pursuit was halted at the border, the Italian command reported, in order not to give rise to new conflicts between Italy and Ethiopia.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—The act today lifted restrictions on the planting of spring wheat.

The action, announced by Secretary Wallace, will allow farmers who had agreed to reduce production by 10 per cent to plant their full acreage this spring and compensate for it by a larger cut in acreage in 1936.

Wallace declared the action was intended to benefit consumers and to avoid reductions in yield and possible importations of wheat resulting "from possible recurrence of drought in several of the major wheat-producing states, where rain fall and subnormal moisture are still substantial."

Stinson, of Atlanta. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Miss Annie Crawford, regent of Elijah Clarke chapter; Dr. Sanford, Mrs. T. H. McCall, of Athens, Georgia U. D. C. president; Mrs. John W. Daniel, Savannah, D. A. R. state regent; and Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, Athens, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs president.

Founded in 1890, the D. A. R. was founded in 1890 by women who "realized the time had arrived when some effort should be made to preserve ideals for which their forefathers had fought."

Patriotic education is most important to present activities, she said, and "work of the Daughters is a true monument to the loyalty and patriotism of the founders."

"In the early days of American history, though we were so poorly prepared to take a stand when our national honor was involved, we had the courage to fight when necessary," Mrs. Daniel said. "Thus we won the respect and admiration of the older countries. Today we must have not only courage but adequate defense to maintain our national integrity."

General Travis, tracing current events, said "the spirit of internationalism is at this moment a mere dream."

The belief of former President Wilson that all people were equally prepared to assert themselves in a peaceful reorganization of world order has been shown to be, at least for the moment, a delusion and a snare, he said.

"The United States alone continues in its attitude to exhibit a gullibility profound and at the same time ridiculous," he said.

Nationalism, he added, has become the religion of all nations and America stands isolated with not a friend. "Europe is under great stress," he said. "The decision of Germany to rearm has caused the most intense fear of an outbreak. Only a spark is needed there to start a conflagration."

To the United States, Travis said, Japan in the orient, is even more menacing. He declared "the attitude of Japan, has daily grown more aggressive."

If America is to continue her isolation she must prepare to protect that isolation, he said, adding that government is now committed to a "proper peace establishment."

Let us hope it is not too late, Travis said.

The convention opened this afternoon with a meeting of the executive board, followed by a dinner at Dawson hall, University of Georgia, given by President S. V. Sanford.

At the meeting later in the university chapel, Mrs. Daniel, first president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, delivered the invocation, followed by pledge to the flag conducted by Mrs. John M. Stinson, of Atlanta. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Miss Annie Crawford, regent of Elijah Clarke chapter; Dr. Sanford, Mrs. T. H. McCall, of Athens, Georgia U. D. C. president; Mrs. John W. Daniel, Savannah, D. A. R. state regent; and Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, Athens, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs president.

THE BACKERS WHITE COURT CASE

Councilmen "Welcome" Proposed Legal Battle To Halt Purchase.

Mayor Pro Tem, Ed A. Gilliam and Councilman John A. White, sponsors of the proposal that the city acquire the Shreve mosque and Fox theater properties as a municipal auditorium Wednesday afternoon "invited a court battle to test the legality of the proposed acquisition" of the beautiful structure.

Prompted by a threat by W. Brown Hayes, chairman of a citizens' committee opposing the purchase, the city had a right to enter into an agreement which did not bind future councils to expenditure of any money, did not increase the public debt and did not act as a pledge of the moral obligation of a city to pay something at a future date.

Hayes announced that the suit will be filed "shortly."

"I hope that Mr. Hayes does test the validity of the contract we propose to draw," Gilliam said. "If this purchase is illegal, we do not want it. I, however, am constrained to say that I think Mr. Hayes or anyone else who spends any money trying to prevent this purchase, under the proposition which the city has been offered, will be doing so uselessly."

Case Is Cited.

"I was told today that a case in direct point has been found in Georgia and that the supreme court ruled that the city had a right to enter into an agreement which did not bind future councils to expenditure of any money, did not increase the public debt and did not act as a pledge of the moral obligation of a city to pay something at a future date."

Mosque properties have been offered to the city on the following basis: 1. Payment of the $725,000 purchase price shall be made only from funds collected from rentals and other revenues supplied by the properties themselves. Interest payments shall be derived from the same source, and this after operation and maintenance has been deducted.

2. The city pledges none of its own revenue or its moral obligation to expend a single dime on the properties during the life of the contract.

Hayes was more vitriolic in his statement than was Gilliam. As chairman of the public buildings committee, he is supervising the drawing of the council's next session to buy the properties.

Hayes Under Fire.

"I want to say that I am not afraid of any court action which may be brought," he asserted. "I think such an effort to scare the council. If Mr. Hayes will get him a good lawyer, he will learn that an injunction will not lie in the premises."

"I want to say another thing. I think if an injunction is brought, it should be initiated by a citizen of Atlanta. Mr. Hayes does not live in the city."

The courts will rule on this matter if Mr. Hayes carries out his threat. But I am warning him here and now that the court costs will be his. The supreme court already has decided this issue. Let him bring the suit. It will be a good thing to test it out.

But I do not think that any citizen who would bring such a suit under the proposition which has been offered the city has the best interests of Atlanta before him. I believe he is selfish and has some ulterior motive in attempting to prevent Atlanta from being given such a magnificent property. That is all the proposal contemplates."

Hermitage Slave Huts Removed to Dearborn

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 20.—(AP)—Two old slave huts from the Hermitage plantation vestiges of the south in an old building, are en route to Dearborn, Michigan, where they will be re-created at the famous museum of Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer.

Great care was exercised in the demolition of the huts, every even minute particle in their construction being preserved even to the mortar between the bricks. The lumber of lime was placed in crocus bags, to be ground and freshened with cement when the huts are rebuilt in the museum.

The huts were built many years ago with slave labor, the bricks that ago into their construction being made on the plantation. Mr. Ford recently purchased the Hermitage buildings from the city and plans to reconstruct the beautiful mansion house, the dozen or so huts remaining at his Richmond plantation in Bryan county.

Amnesia Victim Found With $291 in Pockets

A well-dressed elderly man, unable to tell police his name or address, was being held Wednesday night after he had been found wandering on Houston street, near Pryor street.

Found crumpled up with $291 in bills and coins in his pockets was a small slip of paper on which was written the name, "C. W. Cline, Tampa, Fla." Also in his pockets was a small note from Birmingham round-trip railroad ticket.

Though officers attempted to get him to respond to the name of Cline, the man only shook his head.

Officers said Wednesday night the man had not been drinking, nor was he drugged. He appeared, they said, to be about 60 years old, with salt and pepper hair, and his height was given as about five feet, eight inches.

NANCY PAGE

Soft White Square Are Made Into Wash Cloths for Gift Box.
By FLORENCE La GANKE.

Perhaps it was the grimy look to the melting snow or all out of doors, perhaps it was the fact that Nancy had just heard of the arrival of a baby son in the home of a distant cousin, perhaps it was—well perhaps it was just the desire to try something new that set Nancy off into wash cloth making.

At any rate she was busily engaged with pieces of cheese cloth and of net. She was making two different kinds of wash cloths. One was for little babies and the other was for the traveler.

For the traveler she chose mosquito netting in white. She cut squares of it of the size designated in the direction leaflet. This may be procured by following the directions given at the end of this column.

After she had two squares cut she laid them together and turned in the edges. She held them in place with a running stitch. She could have basted these and run them up on the sewing machine just as well.

The she blanket stitched the edges with twisted embroidery cotton fairly heavy. In the corner of each cloth she worked a small flower. This was done with the embroidery cotton and consisted of nothing more than a few lazy daisy stitches and a bit of outline stitch. The pattern is given on the leaflet.

These cloths are very easy to carry, they take up little room. They dry very quickly since they are of netting. They may be thrown away if desired after a little usage because they are so inexpensive and so quickly made.

OFFICERS NAMED BY DENTAL GROUP AT MEETING HERE

Southern Academy of Periodontology held an all-day annual meeting Wednesday at the Biltmore hotel, dentists especially interested in diseases of the gums.

Dr. Wallace D. Gibbs, of Charlotte, N. C., was special lecturer and clinician, reading a paper at the morning session on "Oral Lesions" which he illustrated with lantern slides, and conducting a table clinic along the same line in the afternoon.

Officers of the ensuing year which were elected at the meeting include Dr. J. A. Slaughter, Asheville, N. C., president; Dr. R. P. Taylor, Jacksonville, Fla., president-elect; Dr. Paul G. Gates, Macon, secretary; and Dr. A. Pitt Beam, Shelby, N. C., treasurer. Members voted to hold the convention again in Atlanta in 1936.

JONES PLANS PROGRAM OF SMOKE INSPECTION

A program of smoke inspection, with the purpose of diminishing the sooty menace in Atlanta, is being put under way by W. A. Jones, smoke inspector of the Atlanta sanitary department.

The program includes inspection of all low pressure plants that are to be out of use during the summer, instructions to all handlers and service men on how to lay up a boiler and remove all destructive agents such as soot and ashes for the idle period and instructions to janitors on keeping down fire hazard by removing rubbish from boiler rooms and disposing of ashes and waste.

As the season advances, the inspector will give expert instruction on firing with less fuel to reduce smoke and instruction on the use of smoke reducing attachments and machinery.

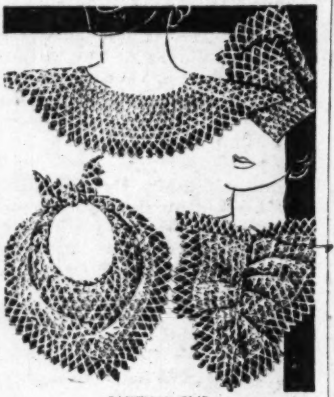

For the baby wash cloth she used two smaller squares. These were of the finest cheese cloth. The two squares were laid together, edges turned in. The two pieces were whipped down along the edges. Then the edge was decorated with a blanket stitch. A plain white or a fast color thread in a pastel color was used.

In the corner of each cloth Nancy outlined the word "baby" using the pattern given on the instruction leaflet.

She usually tied up a bundle of six or eight of these and gave them to new babies. They were easy to use since they were so soft and flexible and were easily sterilized.

Household Arts By ALICE BROOKS

THIS NECKWEAR IS QUICKLY DONE.

If you want to add a dainty touch to your clothes, try doing it with this lovely neckwear. It's the sort of thing that's quickly crocheted for it's done in an open mesh. It drapes softly, too, and we all know how flattering that makes it. Do it in string or yarn. The cuffs, of course, could go with any one of the three pieces. You can do them in two colors, two shades of a color or all in one color, as you wish.

In pattern 5265 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Household Arts Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON.
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Bidding and Play.

Through these daily newspaper articles I receive a great many letters each day asking questions on problems of bidding and play. I derive much pleasure in answering these letters and many interesting hands are brought to my attention. Some of the questions asked are intelligent, some difficult and others are normal.

Frequently I receive a letter in which the bidding of a hand is given and the hand then follows with the question appended, "what was wrong with the bidding?" Sometimes I can tell what is wrong with the bidding without even looking at the hand because no holding possible will justify the bidding shown. Take the following bidding submitted:

North South
2♥ 2NT

Without knowing what final contract was reached, how badly the contract was set, or what was held, a fault must be charged to the North player. It is impossible for North to have a hand which justifies bidding of this type. North opened with a one bid, and over his partner's response made a strong, but not forcing, rebid. His partner then made a minimum response to the rebid and North suddenly went looking for a slam. There is no holding which will permit a player to risk stopping at a part-score point over four would be rounds of bidding, and then suddenly take the bidding beyond game into the slam zone. How does the North player on this hand expect to get to game? On his type of bidding he is either under game if his partner passes his non-forcing bids or if his partner keeps it open, he goes beyond game.

A similar type of bidding submitted to me is the following:

North South
2♥ 3♠

The same reasoning applies to this North player. Admittedly, South shows a good hand by first showing two suits of his own and then supporting North's suit. A six-spade bid by North, however, would be possible as South's four-spade bid marks that player with at the most a singleton heart, and a singleton heart might be the making of the North hand. How North can be strong enough, however, to jump to seven, even with this encouragement, is beyond me. With a hand strong enough to jump to seven spades, North either should have bid three spades or four notrump, or raise one of the minors over three diamonds.

Committee Asks Federal Aid To End 'Sharecropping' Evils

Dr. E. R. Embree (left), of Chicago, and Dr. W. W. Alexander, of Atlanta, members of the committee on minority groups in the economic recovery which held after a survey that the south is facing a "major economic crisis." Photos by Associated Press.

By GARNETT D. HORNER.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Government aid to end the evils of "sharecropping" by enabling thousands of tenant farmers to become self-supporting landowners was urged by a committee of educators Wednesday night after an exhaustive study of Dixie's agricultural situation.

The committee reported that 71 per cent of the south's cotton farms and 58 per cent of all its farms are cultivated by tenants, with cotton acreage curtailment driving thousands of others off the soil entirely and onto relief rolls.

For the families who continue to cultivate the soil "on shares" for a landlord, the report envisions a hopeless, debt-burdened future, "with as meager a diet of fatback, corn pone and molasses as can be found in the world's agriculture."

"The plantation," it points out, "is not interested in feeding its tenant with the vegetables, milk, meats and fruits of a beneficent soil and climate; it wants only its cash crop of cotton."

The report was made public by the "Committee on Minority Groups in the Economic Recovery," Dr. E. R. Embree, Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund; Dr. W. W. Alexander, Atlanta, director of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation; and Dr. Charles S. Johnson, of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., directed the survey.

Its revelations follow close on the heels of demands for a congressional investigation of the sharecroppers' plight by Norman Thomas, socialist leader, and the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, active in Arkansas.

Results of Study Outlined.
The first volume of the report, comprising 250 pages and formulated by Dr. Rupert B. Vance, of the University of North Carolina research staff, cites startling results of the survey and concludes:

"The south is confronted with the necessary choice between continued rapid reorganization, with subsidies for idle lands and relief for displaced tenants and laborers, or a program of government aid by which multitudes now tenants may become self-supporting landowners, as before the example of Ireland, Denmark and other countries."

"It seems obvious to the committee that the continuance of the present system offers no hope, and that the latter course will be not only far better, but also cheaper in the long run."

The survey was intended primarily to explore the status of negro agricultural workers. It revealed, however, that the south's farm tenant population includes many more white people than negroes, and that the total problem of farm tenancy far transcends its racial aspects and menaces the entire future of the region."

In 1930, the committee found, of 30,811 farms in the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, 58 per cent, or 1,780,000 were cultivated by tenants, of whom 1,091,000 were white and 689,000 colored. Tenancy ran higher, or 71 per cent, on cotton farms. The number of white tenants increased by 200,000 in the ten years from 1920 to 1930.

Conditions have grown steadily worse since 1920, Dr. Vance's report says. It points out:

"The federal limitation of cotton acreage, the steady decline of cotton exports due to tariff barriers, and the rapid increase of cotton production abroad, which in 1935 promises to exceed that of the United States, have undercut the living of multitudes of tenant farmers who depend upon cotton and have cast others entirely adrift without access to the land or other assured means of support."

As a result, millions of people who normally should be making their living on the soil have been thrown on relief. Last year in the 13 states covered in this study, one family in every four was on relief and the total relief budget was $22,000,000, with little prospect of improvement unless some means can be found of making these people self-supporting."

Commenting on the report, Embree said the committee regards the Bankhead $1,000,000 farm tenants' bill now before congress as "an utterly inadequate solution of the situation." He estimated that it would provide small farms, up to 40 acres, for 500,000 families, plus homes, livestock and feed.

"These people could grow most of what they need," he said, "and get some cash by raising a few bales of cotton, too."

Answering southern arguments that tenant farmer and share croppers do not want to emulate the European peasantry, the report says, "any self-respecting peasant proprietor in France would look with jealousy at the condition of a Mississippi cotton cropper."

One of the women in a sworn statement made in Atlanta alleges that Stewart was driving the car which collided with the Reagan car when the party drove onto the paved highway several miles below Hapeville from a side road.

Linked With Baer, Atlantan Asks Divorce

MIAMI, Fla., March 20. (P)—Charging desertion, Robert Alexander E. Martyn, of Miami, today filed suit for divorce from Mary Kirk Brown Martyn, of Miami, who is linked in a reported romance with Max Baer, world's heavyweight boxing champion.

Martyn in his petition set forth that their marriage occurred at Key West, Fla., on March 1, 1934, and that his wife deserted him 15 days later. Her residence was listed as New York.

From the home of his parents in San Leandro, Cal., Baer had this comment to make:

"Miss Brown and I are temperamental opposites to each other. There is no romance between us. We are just good friends. I think a divorce will be the best thing for them."

"But that won't make any difference in our relations, absolutely not. Because we were seen in each other's company in Sacramento a few days last week doesn't mean we are going to get married," Miss Brown was quoted as saying.

"I won't think of marrying for five years. Meanwhile, I'm going to devote my time to fighting."

Mrs. Martyn and Baer spent some time in Miami and Miami Beach this winter and frequently were seen together.

How I Keep My Figure

By ELIZABETH ALLAN

Keeping my figure hasn't been a matter of keeping down my weight. In fact, it has been entirely the opposite. I have been trying to gain weight, and imagine that there are many others in the same position.

Exercise. I've found, is at necessity to the gaining of weight, as it is to keeping it off. Every morning, I go through a series of exercises that use up enough energy to give me an appetite. I also take long walks, and get in as much horseback riding as possible. In my opinion, there is nothing more stimulating than riding out in the crisp morning air. Tennis, while strenuous, is another way to obtain the proper exercise and fresh air that are so essential to one's health.

In the morning, after I've taken a long walk, or ride, I have breakfast, which usually consists of orange juice, a cereal with cream, buttered toast and tea. My lunches always include a green salad, or a cream soup, a glass of milk and a nourishing dessert. Dinner, which is my largest meal, includes green vegetables, a salad, potatoes, and meat. I don't believe that too much meat is healthful, and, therefore, I do not have it more than four times a week at most.

In order to counteract any acid condition that might interfere with my general health, I take the juice of a lemon in a glass of hot water before retiring at night, and before breakfast in the morning.

Rest is all important, and I try to get at least eight hours of sleep each night, especially when I'm working. I also take a nap in the afternoon for about an hour, when I have the time. Other than living as normally and naturally as possible, I take no particular precautions to keep my figure, other than those I have mentioned.

Tomorrow—Grace Bradley.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Answers given are those of the author. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My husband and I have known each other all our lives and discovered to our surprise that we were in love with each other. He was a happy-go-lucky fellow. I am a timid soul who had never been able to express my affection to anybody. We love each other devotedly, yet I am not happy. He had told me that if we were married, he would have to live with his step-grandmother and his aunt. Of course I believed that this would be a temporary arrangement. The first unpleasant surprise came when I learned that my husband and these two people who had reared him, got on like cats and dogs. Terrible rows continually and over nothing. Both of them are in good health, but live very comfortably on a pension but they have set their hearts on our remaining with them as long as they live. My husband thinks it is his duty to stay with them. I don't want him to neglect his duty but the truth is that I am not very strong and am getting a bad case of nerves over the state of affairs. Why, if they quarrel all the time, do they want to live together? They are jealous of me and of the way my husband treats me and constantly remind us that they get less consideration. He never is rude to me because I am never rude to him. If I hurt his feelings I say I am sorry and he does the same to me. But they insult him and are insulted by him. This is not the sort of atmosphere I want to live in. How can I get out?

Answer: While you are planning for and waiting for escape from the turbulent times your husband and your in-laws have, you can get a better slant on them than you now have. There are families whose members fight with each other all the time and yet love each other with a fierceness that isn't to be found in some of the most placid and outwardly pleasant family relationships. Now it is hard for a self-controlled, self-contained person to understand this but it is true. They love with the same intensity with which they quarrel and, while there is no excuse for the boorishness and the brutality they employ in their dealings with each other, it doesn't amount to anything but the blowing off of a little excess steam. I know a family where every member feels free to hurt an inmate at any other, yet let an outsider dare to say or do something that one interprets as a slight to any other one of the group and they are all ready to take it up and fight for the offended member.

Your husband, reared in a home where the grown people employed such tactics, took naturally to their way and treats them as he saw them treat each other and him. Showing that he is not vicious, he responds to your gentleness and kindness with gentleness and kindness. This sort of primitive, cave conduct is certainly indicative of lack of culture and refinement but it doesn't mean that hearts are hard or that they lack feeling.

You shouldn't let the rowing get on your nerves, for even if you don't understand or sympathize with the principals and their methods of dealing with each other, they understand and wouldn't swap their way of doing for yours. The old ladies' expressed jealousy of you is part and parcel of their unrestrained emotional reactions. What they feel they put in words, nothing is softened or repressed. What comes up comes out.

In a back court of an Edinburgh hotel a bird dog and a couple of rabbits live in the friendliest and most contented manner. How they got on such amiable terms is a mystery. But there they are for the guests to look at and marvel at. That accommodation of antagonistic animal nature was accomplished more easily than will be the accommodation of your sensitive, reserved nature to the raucous, rampant natures of your husband's family. So start your gentle persuasive campaign for a little home of your own and in time you may bring him to see that oil and water won't stay mixed however often you shake them together. Of course his first duty is to his wife rather than to his aunt and grandmother (even though they got along like cooing doves) yet he like every other man who puts his wife to live with his family, imagines that she must feel about them as he does. So her problem is to show him that she doesn't and to show him that he will get a hundred per cent dividend from his investment in a home for himself and his wife.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Gracing the center of the table was a mound of white stocks, bride's roses, gardenias and maiden hair fern. At either end of the table were silver candelabra holding white burning tapers. Moore Is Greatly Impressed by Work of Cracker Rookies

TENSION AND RELAXING.

If there is one matter that directly concerns everyone connected with sport and existence in general, it is the matter of tension and the ability to relax.

Tension and the inability to relax, through ignorance of the subject, combine to form one of the roughest barricades of sport.

No one understands this situation better than Dr. Edmund Jacobson, of the University of Chicago, whose somewhat recent book, "You Must Relax," received wide attention.

Knowing that Dr. Jacobson had made scientific laboratory tests upon this subject for many years, I called on him yesterday afternoon to get as much of his time as one could get in a few hours' talk.

Gilbert Hall Wins Match Easily

How to Relax.

It might be stated in advance that Dr. Jacobson has made tests with football players and other athletes who are subjected to high tension and wasted energy and motion. But few know how to do it. Just how should one start along the right line?

"In the first place," I said to Dr. Jacobson, "everyone knows that it is important to relax—to conserve energy—to eliminate waste motion. But few know how to do it. Just how should one start along the right line?"

"It is largely a matter of training along the right lines," Dr. Jacobson answered. "The average person may think he is relaxing, or relaxed, when he is still full of tension. Our tests have shown this. Briefly, we teach our patients how to contract every muscle—then how to relax these muscles. We give exercises in contraction and relaxing, which can accomplish this."

"Does this tension," I asked, "come largely from the brain, the muscular or the nervous system?"

Dr. Jacobson replied, "It certainly isn't all mental. It is possible to have mental tension and yet keep the muscular and nerve systems relaxed. Tension, to any extent, in the muscular system, whether you are sitting or in motion, is extremely tiring. It cuts in heavily on stamina. It is possible to be at high tension and then to relax completely, to relax every muscle and nerve in the body, at the first opportunity offered. Those able to do this will last much longer than those who don't, it is one of the most important factors connected with sport—with every branch of sport."

Fred Haas Enters Masters' Tourney

HIGBE, LIPSCOMB, THOMAS SHOW PLENTY OF STUFF

Manager 'Sold' on Them. Faces Problem With 'B' Pitchers.

By Jimmy Jones.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 20.—Eddie Moore, whose Irish eyes were smiling after today's workout of the Cracker over "the island," walked into the lobby of the Gilbert hotel with a couple of statements for the press.

Both of them dealt with two of his rookie players who showed him an awful lot there today.

They were:

1. Young Kirby Higbe, the pitcher from Columbia, S. C., who set Manager Moore in the state that the society writers call along with a crackling curve ball and humming fast one in batting practice.

2. Young Gerard Lipscomb, the boy who was called the "ugly duckling" of the squad a month ago and who is burning them up at second base down here.

NATURAL PITCHER.

Of young Higbe, tried briefly by the Cracker last year, he said: "This boy has more natural stuff than any pitcher I've faced out there so far. All he needs is a season in the Piedmont and he'll be a real pitcher for us."

As for Lipscomb, Moore is tickled to death with that young man's work. "There is little to develop into the best second baseman in the league before the season is over," Eddie, who knows second basemen, declared.

"There isn't much I can teach him; he knows how to tag the bag, how to make throws and everything. He's one of the few young second basemen I ever saw who knew how to throw off the right foot after taking the ball at second. He may not be as flashy as some, but he suits me all right."

Getting back to Moore, his opinion was shared by Dick Niehaus, the veteran southpaw, who saw him work today.

"He showed me a curve ball that explodes and his fast one is a 'home' the venerable Richard observed. Anyway, this Higbe is a comer and don't be surprised to see him bobbing up with a lot of competition for Moore's Class B jobs along with Williams, Durrham, Martin, Hays, etc."

MOORE'S PROBLEM.

Moore's problem in choosing three "B" pitchers from these talented youngsters is increasing daily.

There is another young pitcher in whom Moore is greatly interested, and who will be given a test Saturday in an exhibition game with Montreal, which club is managed by Frank Shaughnessy, the man who invented the Shaughnessy system.

The pitcher is Luther (Bud) Thomas, who may crowd one of the men off the roster if they don't hear down during the spring games. Thomas has impressed Moore so much that he may manage to keep him around some time close by this year if he keeps on looking good.

Thomas would be a sure bet for the staff, but for the fact that he is an "A" man. He will pitch three innings against Montreal and Moore will be looking at him from close range at third base.

MUST WATCH THEM.

"I've gotta go along with fellows like Thomas during the spring and look them over thoroughly before letting any of them go," Moore said. Anyway, the Cracker pitching staff has someone on it besides Kelley, Nelson, Lindsay and Schmidt.

Moore revealed some more of his pitching plans for this week-end's set of exhibition games.

He will use Bill Schmidt, Jim Lindsay and "Whitey" Hayes three innings each in the game with Montreal here Sunday. Al Williams, Hays and Ken Kenney will work the same number against Palatka at Palatka. Moore will go over to supervise the youngsters in this game.

Harry Kelley, who will start Saturday's game against Montreal, today volunteered to work five innings against that club instead of three.

"I feel good enough to pitch the entire game," Kelley declared.

Moore may let him go five but that's all.

Hit-and-Run Driver Ends Patsy's Spring

Little White Spitz, Granted Run of Block, Made Valiant Fight for Life.

By Jack Troy.

Patsy, a fluffy white spitz, has gone where there aren't any winters or any hit-and-run drivers to leave you yelping on the pavement, stunned, and your pretty white coat covered with dust and blood.

All winter long Patsy whizzed around the corners of the yard enjoying life as much as anybody. This week Patsy was a bother though. Patsy had a fine yard in which to run and yelp greetings at strange canine brothers and sisters that perchance happened by. But it was so confining.

And so yesterday, a beautiful spring day, Patsy could stand it no longer. She took the corners in high and protested loudly. "Can't you see it's spring," she seemed to say. "I like my home and all that but why not let me out for just a little while?"

Patsy's owner finally listened to her plea and gave her the freedom of the block. And what a proud Patsy she was. It had been a long winter and there were friends to visit.

MAKING FRIENDS.

She came prancing up to the door and put her front paws against the screen. She wouldn't come in. She just wanted to let you know she was enjoying her romp, even if the first day of spring wasn't until tomorrow. Patsy, sassy as life, came back several times. The door was opened and she acknowledged pats on the head. "Come in, Patsy?" No, no, a thousand times no. She was having too much fun in the sunshine. And there was no white picket fence barring the way.

A colored boy walked by and Patsy waited up to him, nudging his hand. She seemed to be saying, "I like you, get away, dog!" She wanted to be friends with everybody.

Patsy didn't know there were drivers of automobiles who shot by in violation of all speed laws and did care about the safety of pedestrians, let alone a little fluffy white spitz. You think you like to live, huh?

FIGHTS FOR LIFE.

"Well, you should have seen that little white spitz, lying there by the curbstone, her pretty white coat covered with blood, panting, fighting for the right to romp in the sunshine. The car that hit her was gone, of course. You can insert your own name for the driver and you'll be perfectly right."

Other cars stopped, however. Patsy lay panting, blood running from her mouth, her big eyes looking appealingly up at you for aid. And you knelt there, feeling pretty bad about it all and pretty helpless, too.

She didn't yelp or groan, but just lay there panting, suffering as any mortally wounded human might.

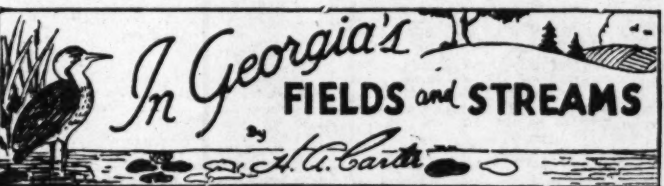

Some dogs would have given up, but Patsy lived an hour after a kindly gentleman had taken her in his car to a veterinarian. He said it was a matter of hours, but he would care for the safety of pedestrians, let alone a little fluffy white spitz. You think you like to live, huh?

Well, it wasn't so amazing at that. That is, after you had seen her out on that long-awaited spring romp, Marie Settles, her owner, wept unashamedly as they took Patsy away as a specimen.

He then removes the intestines and examines them for parasite. Tapeworm, roundworm, and other endo-parasites he removes carefully and places them in small vials. Into the vials go small labels, bearing the number of the specimen, where it was taken, and the name of the collector. When these vials get numerous, and they often do with Ed, he ships them off to Washington, where the Bureau of Animal Industry is busy identifying them and noting their characteristics.

There is a great big why back of all this. It is too much trouble not to have an excellent reason for being. The idea is to find out just what parasites play in the life cycles of the animals, and if they have any influence on population fluctuations.

Up in Minnesota, where work of this sort has been going on for some time in the Lake Alexander region, I am told that it is not rare to find one snowshoe rabbit with as many as 20,000 parasites. How an animal like that can live, I don't understand. Yet it is not the direct action of the parasites that is important. It is the various viruses that they carry. Tuberculosis, the great plague of rodents, is a disease spread in this fashion.

If I had to give a title to this item, it would read like G. A. Henry's titles, or those of his brothers of the cloth, the lesser literary lights whose books I devoured by the mile years ago and whose names I have completely forgotten. This title would have to be "Afflicted With Ed Komarek."

Ed is a mammalogist. He is one of those queer fellows that go out with a sack full of mouse traps and scatter them here and there all afternoon. Then he strolls over the same route in the morning, picking up a mouse here and a rat there, a shrew here and maybe a squirrel yonder. These he drops into a collecting bag, wrapped in separate cloth bags, while he resets the traps and examines those that are not sprung. He returns to camp with his specimens.

Now comes the part that takes time to complete. Ed takes one cloth bag, dumps the specimen out, turns the sack inside out, and very carefully picks off any fleas or mites or ticks or whatnot that happen to be there. Then with a pair of forceps in each hand, he carefully examines the fur of the specimens for additional parasites. This done, he picks up his measuring tape, makes the routine measurements, and then prepares the animal

CANDLER HEADS NEW ATLANTA TENNIS GROUP

Invitation Is Underwritten as 40 Enthusiasts Join Association.

By Jack Troy.

The Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association, not a closed organization, was formed at a well-attended meeting yesterday afternoon at the Atlanta Athletic Club with Walter Candler being unanimously elected president.

With the formation of the association it was assumed that tournaments held here in the future will not simply "happen"; they will be run.

Reg Fleet and Bryan M. (Bitty) Grant Jr., moving spirits of the association, were gratified to see approximately 40 tennis enthusiasts on hand for the organization meeting.

Fleet put the name of Walter T. Candler in nomination and Mr. Candler was elected president unanimously without a dissenting vote. Long recognized as one of the leading sportsmen in the city, choice of Candler as head of the association is recognized as an ideal one.

OTHER OFFICERS.

Other officers include Charles S. Gardner, vice president; Cody Laird, secretary, and George Elyea, treasurer.

All those present yesterday joined the association and, at the same time, agreed to underwrite the forthcoming Atlanta invitation tennis tournament at so much a person. Ample financial support was assured.

There was a lot of round-table discussion and Seals Aiken offered a resolution thanking the newspapers of Atlanta for their support of tennis in the past. The meeting was not only a success but a great forward step in the interest of the sport in the Gate City.

Atlanta has every reason to be the tennis center of the south, considering the number and caliber of players, and the newly formed association plans to make it so.

ADVISORY GROUP.

An advisory committee named yesterday included Rex Fleet as chairman and a membership of Bryan Grant Jr., Lindsey Hopkins Sr., Bobby Jones, De Sales Harrison, Jackson P. Dick, Count Boyer, Doc Wilson, Z. A. Rice, Jack Simpson, Evangelina MacLennan, Malon Courts, Bryan Grant, Malcolm Reynolds, Britt Knox, Molly Williamson, Ed Van Winkle, J. D. McCord, George Griffin and Mrs. Etta Taylor Coyne.

A tournament committee to handle the invitation was also named with Reg Fleet as chairman. Members include Count Boyer, Charles Gardner, Bryan Grant, Cody Laird and George Elyea.

As previously pointed out, the Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association is not a closed organization. All tennis enthusiasts are invited to join.

"JUST GETTING STARTED," said Cody Laird, the new secretary. Dues are very nominal, being $1 per year. And all who wish to become affiliated may do so by contacting Mr. Cody Laird at Hemlock 4846 or in person.

No, sir. Tournaments held here in the future will not simply "happen"; they will be run. And you may lay to that.

Warren, Mays In Title Game

Warren and Mays' Laundry will play the championship game in the Y-Civic Basketball league tonight at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 8:30. These two teams have been outstanding all year, and have tied for titular honors. Warren Refrigerator Company finished with a whirlwind campaign this year, and Mays' Laundry has been strong since they started to play three years ago.

Kraft and DeMolay will play a curtain raiser at 7:30 and between games a free throw contest involving one man from each of the eight teams in the league will be held. There will be no advance in prices for these games.

Atlanta League Plans Complete

Final plans for the season were made by the Atlanta League at its meeting on Wednesday night. Eight clubs have been admitted and everything is set for a successful season. Umpires selected Wednesday are Dick Anchors, Watermelon Young, Rachel Bell and Hoffman. The alternates are Wagner and Hornsby.

It was decided to hand in franchise fees and lists of players on next Wednesday if possible, although the playing season does not start until April 13.

The City league which plays again next Tuesday will have a vacancy for one team. This league will play its games on Sunday afternoons.

Officials Are Here For Six-Day Race

Dave Wahlberg and George Harvey, two of the outstanding figures in American six-day bicycle racing circles, arrived here late Wednesday by air to supervise preliminary plans for the six-day race to begin Friday, March 29, at the auditorium.

Coming from Newark, the center of the bicycle trade and home of important racing groups, both officials of the National Cycle Association were optimistic over the prospects of the inaugural here of modern six-day bicycle competition.

"With Madison Square Garden shut down and no other important cycle meet on schedule in the east at present, the Atlanta race is attracting the cream of the crop of international stars," they state.

Hugh Nunnally Breaks 74x75 At 16 Yards

More convincing proof to the contrary that one form of shooting hurts the other was offered yesterday at the Capitol Gun Club by that fine wielder of fowling pieces, Hugh Nunnally. You should have been there to see it. That is, if you are interested in the finer arts of smashing clay pigeons.

Nunnally broke 47 skeet targets in a process of warming up and then ran a 50 straight at the 16 yards. He previously had broken a 24 at the traps, so he had the altogether remarkable score of 74x75.

As a matter of fact, Hugh Nunnally, the old skeet shooter, has an unfinished run of 56 16-yard targets. Jack Gray broke 47 skeet targets and 49 16-yard targets yesterday. Gray is also a new hand at the 16 yards.

Bill Healey won the silver goblet in the skeet competition, breaking an actual 49x50 and having a five-bird handicap which gave him a score of 54. Jack Gray was runner-up with 50.

Other leading scores included Joe Orr, 47; E. L. Wright, 44; Clyde King, 44, and Dr. Lon Grove, 44. Jack Tway broke 49 16-yard targets, while other scores included Clyde King, 44; Larry Grant, 44; John Coleman, 40; Jack Troy, 20x25, and John King, 19x25.

REVOLTA, PICARD LEAD GOLF MEET

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 20.—(AP)—Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard turned in 68's today to go into the lead for the first-round lead in the $3,000 Charleston open golf tournament.

"I'll have a look at the beach tomorrow," he said. "If it isn't right, I'll start the mechanics packing up and carting her. I don't think there's even the faintest possibility that the beach will improve overnight."

Most of the improvement of the past few days was wiped out as the wind shifted again last night to the west and left bumps and ripples in the beach.

MAIDEN VOYAGE

By Kathleen Norris

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Antoinette Taft, 25, and attractive girl, is destined with her job as society editor of the San Francisco Call. She lives with her elder sister, Brenda, her brothers Cliff and Bruce, and Aunt Meg. On the Call staff is a blond named Jess Carter, who gets a large salary and keeps a fine apartment at which Frank Flitch, the managing editor, is a frequent visitor. When Jess asks Tony to make one of a dinner party there, Tony asks the advice of her friend, Harry Kerr. This results in a proposal, the last thing Tony wants, to marry a Mrs. Bellamy and is thrilled to find that her husband is Larry Bellamy, handsome young editor of the Journal, whom she had met while job-hunting. Mrs. Bellamy is a trail woman, 10 years older than Larry. She and Tony become fast friends. Tony is the Bellamy's guest at Santa Barbara, and as Larry is driving back a truck his tire cuts. She thinks she is badly hurt, and she hears him saying, "Tony, my darling, my darling." He means his Journal with the Call and becomes an associate editor of the Call, but is so busy that Tony sees little of him before the marriage of Brenda and young Dr. Alvin Atwater, who Monterey Larry leaves a note on her desk, saying Ruth is back in the city and wants Tony to dine with her. Tony gets it a day late. The day of the wedding, and goes to his office. His manner is casual, and she bursts into tears, sobbing, "If you don't understand—Larry has difficulty controlling his emotions, but does and when Tony goes home she has a feeling of loneliness. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY."

They got out, a little stiff after the more than a hundred chilly miles, followed Larry into the clean little breakfast room, fell upon sliced figs, hot coffee, brown toast and fried eggs with the appetites of wolves.

Tony and Ruth took off their coats and stowed them in shipshape fashion before getting back into the car. The sunshine had strengthened into a threat of real heat now and the fields about the ridge were scented with dried tarweed and the rich smell of apples and pines.

Presently they turned west and were out on the cliffs above the ocean; for a hundred magic miles the road followed the lip of the sea. Ruth, on the front seat, went to sleep; but Tony was still wide awake and cheerful when they reached their journey's end, a comfortable hotel cottage in a green garden, that burning afternoon. Ruth preferred a tub bath and a nap, but presently Tony and Larry were in the cool salt breakers, the girl almost mad with delight.

"I tell you that the ocean does something to me!"

"I see it does," Larry shouted back as a great wave caught them.

Tony found her room small and warm in the last heat of the day, but she herself made amends. Ruth was evidently asleep, for there was no sound from the room next door. There was a strip of garden just opposite her opened French window; roses were in bloom and the tall spikes of a phlox; there were eucalyptus trees; a sprinkler was sending a refreshing wet sound through the warm air.

Dressed in an elegant, crossbarred organdie, Tony reflected that she might be wearing the least expensive clothes in Santa Barbara tonight, but that did not mean that she was the least attractive girl. Evidence to the contrary gratified her on all sides as she walked at Ruth's side across a stretch of blazing garden to the hotel for a drink. There was a young man at her table to add to this enchanted night the further enchantment of a new affair. For he looked for her instantly, did not know her, and she felt a sudden, automatic rising of the music began, to dance with her. Tony could see that Larry was amused at the swiftness of her conquest.

"Antoinette—it's a name to dream on," said Duncan O'Connor, dancing. "It's my favorite name. Taft is too long for me to remember, my brain isn't very good. This is my favorite music in the whole world; I mean it. You're what? Larry's niece?"

"No, just a friend. I'm the society reporter on the Call."

"I'm on a newspaper here. I half own it."

"Why, how old are you?" Tony looked up at her companion curiously as they walked back to the table.

"Oh, breakfast here!" the women exclaimed together.

"Oh, breakfast here!" the women exclaimed together.

"Have you reached ages already?" Larry asked pulling out Tony's chair. "I haven't reached Antoinette's," Duncan said modestly.

"He's got a certain line," Larry warned. "But don't believe one word he says."

The music recommenced and this time it was Larry who rose and held open his arms for Tony. For some reason she could not define she found it oddly exciting, thrilling, even frightening to move to the throbs of the music over the wide floor with him, his arms about her and her heart beating so close to his own heart.

"Ruth wouldn't dance?"

"I asked her. She never does."

She was quite breathless when she went back to her salad; afterward she danced with Duncan again and with a boy that Duncan knew. Then Larry and Ruth said that they were going back to the cottage and Tony said she would go too; they were all tired. On the way back she said that she meant to get up and swim before breakfast.

"It's a date," said Larry. "I'm playing golf at 10 but I'd love it at eight. And we can breakfast afterward."

"I'm playing bridge," Ruth said. "Alice telephoned about it. But I believe I'll get up early and swim too."

The week flew by; it was unlike any other time Tony had ever known. The hours seemed dreamlike, unreal, perfumed with flowers that were sweeter than other flowers, set to the deep organ-tone of the tireless ocean into which she flung herself shouting with joy every morning; and every afternoon. Cool and sweet in fresh linen she went with Ruth to afternoon readings, to one or two teas; she became a familiar figure at the Beach Club; her blue eyes dancing over the lunch room with their appetite for joy and adventure never quenched.

Larry came down on Friday night; Saturday, Sunday flashed by, the holiday was over. Again the linen and organdies were packed and again the alarm was set.

When clothes are taken out and are found moth-eaten, the first thing you find moths among the garments. However, nobody ever saw a moth eating the clothes. Moths have no teeth and usually do not eat anything during their lifetime. It is the larvae which eat clothes. Moths lay eggs among clothes, and the eggs hatch into the larvae (worms) which feed upon the cloth. Finally the larvae grow fat and spin cocoons in which they sleep and become changed into moths.

STRANGE WAYS OF INDIA.

IV—Brahma, Vishnu and Siva.

Four faces for one being may seem a great many; but that is how Hindus picture the mighty god, Brahma. He is said to look "in all directions at once"—that is, north, south, east and west.

Two-thirds of the people in India are classed as members of the Brahman. They worship him as gods and goddesses, but chief among them are Brahma, Vishnu and Siva.

Hindus have called Brahma "the creator of all things," and "the World form of a human being. Once, we are told, he appeared as the hero Rama. Vishnu is pictured, sometimes, in the form of a human being—with four arms but with only a single head. He is said to be the lord of the universe. The entrance to one of his temples must face the rising sun.

An enemy of Vishnu is Siva, who may be described as "the lord of death." His temples face the setting sun, to show that this god stands for the dying day.

In Hindu lore we find many things said about Siva. He is not only ruler of the dead, but he also has power over storms and fire, even over the sun and the moon.

Hindus do not agree about the powers which their gods are supposed to have. Some place Siva in the first place, others say he is done by Vishnu or Brahma.

Sometimes, but not always, Siva is pictured with five heads, or faces; and it is told that he rides on the back of a bull. In his hands he is supposed to carry a bow, a thunderbolt, an axe and other weapons.

Among the Hindu gods, Siva is Agni, god of fire. He has been placed before the people as having two faces, three legs and seven arms.

There was a time when Brahma ranked first in the minds of most Hindus; but he has given place, in large measure, to Vishnu.

Long ago, Vishnu was honored as ruler of the sun; but as time passed he grew to be much more than that. Sacred writings of the Hindus say that he has come to earth many times in the form of animals, and in the
